In Chicago.
A Good Railroad.
Boy Criminals.
About New Babies.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.

COLD IN Chicago, ten degrees below freezing, light snow along the tracks coming from New York on the Twentieth Century.

The New York Central keeps up to its standard, in spite of the depression and discouraging stock quotations.

In the dining car before it leaves the station at 4 o'clock you see every waiter in spotless white standing beside his table. Perhaps that doesn't affect safety, but a railroad that attends well to one part of its business also looks carefully after its engines, rails and roadbed.

THE NEW YORK Central is one of the very good railroads of this country, which has the best railroads in the world. It is a pity that American railroads have financial difficulties, but they will before long utilize modern high-speed, light equipment possibilities with merely convenient, local freight deliveries, instead of complaining about competition. With their priceless right of way they will make greater profit than ever.

CHICAGO, LIKE New York and many other American cities, has plenty of worries over taxes, credit and the other things which arrive when prosperity, going 100 miles an hour, suddenly runs into a stone wall.

But next spring's Chicago exposition is going forward, everything ahead of schedule, and that is the important thing to Chicago, which likes to finish what it starts.

A FEDERAL bureau in Washington investigating crime finds that boys nineteen years old and younger constitute the most dangerous and numerous section of modern crime. In eight months, 32,287 have been arrested under 20 years of age.

Chicago, to its regret, knows something about that. The police have arrested a boy, 16, accused of murdering his grandmother under dreadful circumstances. They have also arrested another boy, 19, who killed a man when the latter resented his entrance into a parked car in which the man sat with a woman.

This young killer, not a professional gangster, made capture easy by bragging of his crime to a stranger and carrying in his pocket this memorandum, "In case of accident, notify Father Patrick Malone, of St. Peter's Church, Polk and Clark streets."

IN THE room of the boy of 16 wanted for murder was found a bottle of "bonded whisky." George W. Wickersham, head of President Hoover's crime commission, says he has changed his mind, and considers prohibition a failure. No wonder.

SOME AMERICANS, considering the gold dollar a good substitute for the golden calf of old, are worried because "Canada is inflating her currency."

Canada has just sold $35,000,000 worth of four per cent treasury bills, running two years. Canadian banks have taken them at a profit to themselves of one per cent and will put out Canadian currency.

IF A COUNTRY as rich as Canada cannot afford to issue $35,000,000 worth of notes or currency it might as well close up now.

Canada, our best customer, is a good friend, although we bicker occasionally. But she must do business with the cheap pound sterling on one side and the dear American dollar on the other, which means "between the devil and the deep sea."

Canada has done a good job, balancing herself on the financial tightrope that stretches from the proud American dollar to the distressed material British pound.

INCIDENTALLY, although you may not have as many dollars as you would like, you will notice that the American dollar has kept its place and our banking system is at least on top of the world as regards quality of money and credit.

THE GERMAN scientist, Dr. Richard Goldschmidt, great biologist, says parents will soon be able to decide in advance whether the new arrival shall be a boy or a girl.

"It is just a question of technique. We know completely the mechanism by which nature controls sex in man, animals and plants."

Let us hope men will not be able to control the sex of children, for the next ten thousand years, at least. The conceit of men and the devotion of women would fill the world with too many boys.

IT MAY interest you to know that it is now possible, with absolute certainty, to know whether or not a child is to be born, long before the X-ray reveals any skeleton, and, possibly long in advance of birth, to know whether the child arriving will be a girl or boy, although sex cannot be controlled.

CANADIAN whisky manufacturers plan a one hundred million dollar merger, getting ready for business in the United States. French wine makers are preparing for United States trade, and in Germany and other countries brewers of special kinds of beer are also preparing.

They may all be disappointed, for it is probable that importation of any kind of alcoholic liquor will be forbidden, the Girl Tells of Col. Robins' Pledge

EDUCATION PROMISED, SHE SAYS

Took Hikes With Dry Crusader, Mountain Lass Asserts

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Nov. 21.—A pretty 19-year-old girl, with laughing blue eyes and bobbed hair, today entered into the strange case of Col. Raymond Robins, who mysteriously disappeared September 3 as a noted dry crusader and turned up at the tiny Appalachian mountain village of Whittier in the role of a gold prospector without a memory.

The girl is Wilma McHan, daughter of Robert McHan, who ran the boarding house where Robins stayed.

She says the bearded man, who spent two months as a boarder at her home under the name of Reynolds Rogers and who has been identified by Mrs. Robins as unquestionably her husband, had said he would like to send her to college.

TELLS OF HIKES

She, with other girl friends, accompanied him on some of the daily hikes he made into the Great Smoky Mountains. She also waited on the table at home and Robins often aided her and her 16-year-old sister, Madge, in their studies.

Asked if it was true that he

DROP BLUE LAW CONCERT FIGHT

Likelihood of interference from religious bodies with Sunday concerts of the Pittsburgh Symphony Society faded today.

The Rev. Dr. R. M. Blackwood, president of the Sabbath Association of Western Pennsylvania, said the organization does not plan to press a claim that the concerts violate the 1794 Blue Laws, and no mention of the concert was made at meetings of the Methodist Episcopal Ministers' Union and the Presbyterian Ministerial Association today. Both meetings were devoted to Thanksgiving services.

Three thousand persons heard the concert, in which Coe Glade, Chicago Opera Company contralto, sang in Syria Mosque last night. Regarding the possibility that she might be jailed on a charge of violating the Blue Laws, Miss Glade had said:

"It would be just too thrilling to go to jail for the cause of good music."

Dr. Blackwood had made protest against the concert to Public Safety Director James M. Clark, but Clark had refused to interfere.

SETTLE RADIO TRUST SUIT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Termination of the government anti-trust suit against the Radio Corporation of America and affiliated companies, by a consent decree entered in the United States Court at Wilmington, Del., was announced today by the Department of Justice.

This concludes a litigation which has been in progress more than a year.

The injunction directed the complete divorcement of the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company from the R. C. A. and enjoined the defendants from attempting to restrain trade by means of patent licenses or similar devices in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

HITLER OFFERED GERMAN HELM

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, Nov. 21.—President von Hindenburg offered Adolf Hitler the German chancellorship today provided he could form a cabinet based on a workable Reichstag majority and retaining Foreign Minister Konstantin von Neurath and Minister of Defense Kury von Schleicher.

The offer was made during a 15-minute conference between the two men, in which the aged President sought through the Nazi leader to end Germany's political crisis, caused by the downfall of Col. Franz von Papen's cabinet of aristocrats.

After the conference, it was officially stated Hitler had informed the President the Nazis would support a government only if Hitler were named chancellor.

Von Hindenburg, it was said, then told Hitler to confer with leaders of other parties and find out under what conditions a Reichstag majority would be possible under a cabinet headed by the Nazi chief.

Hitler promised to produce a written answer to these questions by this afternoon.

Officials in close touch with the situation said they did not think Hitler would obtain the necessary support to form a cabinet under the President's terms.

The Catholic Centrists, Nationalists and Bavarian elements would balk, it was predicted.

Kidnaping Stirs Frosh To Revolt, 40 Hurt

CALIFORNIA, Pa., Nov. 21.—Freshmen and sophomores of California State Teachers' College today engaged in a skirmish on the campus after the former had revolted against the "iron hand" tactics of their upper classmen.

Two score students suffered blackened eyes, lacerations, bloody noses or had their clothes torn. One youth was knocked out in the fight.

Dr. Robert M. Steele, college president, attribute dthe trouble to the apparent refusal of the freshmen to obey rules laid down by the sophomore class.

The freshmen revolt was said to have been called by Bernard McAndrews, Monongahela, class president, who was abducted by the sophomores last Friday night while his class staged a party and "taken for a ride" to a farm near Daisytown, where the sophomores are reported to have cut off most of his hair.

Today the frosh appeared at the college minus their traditional green skull caps, arm bands and black ties. They were met by the sophomores and the battle followed.

MAN, WIFE ARRESTED IN HOLDUPS

Crash Traps Pal of 'Pockmarked' Bandit; Loot Identified

The chance arrest of Eugene Steele, 22, of Toledo, following an auto accident, today, led to his admission, police say, that he is a stickup pal of Fred Prince, held as answering the description of the "pockmarked" bandit.

Steele and three others, one of them a woman, were arrested early today after their car collided with a taxicab at Whitfield and Broad streets.

ADDRESS CLUE

At detective headquarters, Steele gave his address as 688 Florida avenue, Mt. Lebanon, identical with that of Prince, who had been arrested a short time before, with his wife, Mrs. Marie Prince, 25, on a tip. They were found in their home.

Steele is alleged to have told detectives he came here three weeks ago from Toledo and that he and Prince had participated in several robberies.

A letter found on Steele, detectives said, promised his mother in Toledo a pint of whisky and $10. They said the whisky was that identified by H. C. Henderson as stolen from his drug store in Hermitage avenue, last Thursday. Three bottles were recovered from Prince's home, police said.

HELD FOR QUIZ

Prince and his wife were held over at a hearing in Central Station. Steele and two of three companions, Charles Brusso, 18, of 2308 Omega street, and Rocco Gallippi, 16, of 58 Orphan street, were held over in Morals Court. His fourth companion in the automobile, Mrs. Betty Prince, 23, of Toledo, is in West Penn Hospital with slight injuries suffered in the collision.

H., 7133 Kelly street, yesterday, but expected to speak at a meeting of the Squirrel Hill Board of Trade in the assembly room of the Peoples-Pittsburgh Trust Company Building, 5810 Forbes street, at 8:15 o'clock tonight. He will speak on "Civic Honesty."

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith will make his debut as a singer on the stage of Town Hall on November 29, it was announced today.

Smith will lead a crowd of people in "The Sidewalks of New York" and he may sing other songs. Proceeds will go to the New York Infirmary for Women and Children.

Radio Police Find 'Mystery' Only Romping Dogs

Police radio cars of Oakland hurried to 63 Bates street—a store—early today after a mysterious signal had been registered on the switchboard at the Mayflower exchange.

Answering the call the operator said the only response she got was the barking of a dog. She called police.

Police on arrival at the address found the telephone knocked to the floor and nearby two dogs at play.

HINT PINCHOT DEAL ON SENATE

Pact With G. O. P. on Davis Seat Rumored In Capital

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. (AP.)—Gov. Pinchot's latest flying trip to the capital left in its wake a fresh outburst of speculation as to what would be his next major political move.

The latest rumor, which some political observers said gained a degree of credibility by one of Pinchot's statements here Saturday, is that the Governor has laid the groundwork for a situation whereby he might himself be given Senator Davis' seat if Davis were turned down by the incoming Democratic Senate.

PINCHOT UNDECIDED

Pinchot said yesterday he was "weighing in his mind" the advisability of accompanying Davis' certificate of re-election with a personal letter challenging the junior Senator's right to a seat after he had been indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of violating the lottery law.

A rumor is that the Governor is counting strongly on the Senate refusing to seat Davis, and that Pinchot then would run for the unexpired term.

One political observer said a plan had been talked of in which the Governor would be backed by the state Republican organization in return for his supporting the organization candidate for Governor and Senator Reed in 1934—and appointing an organization man to the Senate to serve until the election.

Many political observers, however, cling to their contention of some months' standing that the Governor will finish his term and then battle Senator Reed in the 1934 Republican primary.

When asked whether he would oppose Reed, Pinchot said:

"That's a long time ahead."

CABINET GOSSIP

Talk of Pinchot getting a place in Gov. Roosevelt's cabinet, which flourished during the late summer and early autumn, has diminished with the increasing number of demands from the President-elect's own party.

Pinchot's many years in the forestry service, his perfect agreement with Roosevelt on public utility questions, and his refusal to commit himself during the campaign gave rise to speculation that he might receive the Interior Department portfolio.

The tangible result of the Governor's trip was that it brought him assurance he would have both Senators' support when he made his next request for federal unemployment relief funds.

Saved in Fire

DOROTHY CONROY

FOUR RESCUED IN N. S. FIRE

A 60-year-old woman, her two daughters and a grand-daughter were carried to safety through smoke-filled hallways by firemen early today when flames threatened destruction of a three-story building at 1900 St. Ives street, North Side.

Firemen were forced to don gas masks to fight the blaze, which they held to the first floor and basement of the building. Loss was estimated at $2,500.

Mrs. Mary Stewart, 60, her son-in-law, James Conroy, and daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Conroy, slept on the second floor, while another daughter, Mrs. Mary Hall, and Dorothy Conroy, 7, had quarters on the third floor. They were awakened by smoke. The rescues were effected by Fire Capt. George Kinross and Hoseman William McClain and William Ostermyer, of Engine Company No. 44.

The fire started in the basement of a confectionery and grocery operated by Mrs. Stewart on the first floor of the building. The origin of the blaze has not been determined. When discovered by a passerby the entire lower floor was filled with flames and smoke.

VETO CHANCE HELD SLIM FOLLOWING PARLEY

Britten Sees President Ready for Change In Volstead Law

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Representative Britten (Rep.), of Illinois, after a conference with President Hoover, at which he said possible beer legislation was discussed, told newspapermen he was quite satisfied Mr. Hoover would not veto a beer bill.

Long an advocate of modification of the Volstead Act, he said he had devoted his entire conference with the chief executive to discussion of this subject.

URGES WET CONFERENCE

After spending about 10 minutes in the President's office, Britten spoke with newspapermen on leaving for the Capitol. He refrained from making any statement upon Mr. Hoover's direct reaction to the views he had expressed to him.

Britten said he was "ready to go ahead with a beer bill that would provide against return of the saloon, and would protect states wishing to remain dry, but would provide for others 2.75 beer by weight."

Communications will be sent today to Representatives Beck (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, and La-Guardia (Rep.), of New York, leader and secretary respectively of the Republican wet bloc in the House, Britten said, asking them to arrange a meeting of this bloc prior to the convening of Congress on December 5.

10 CENTS A BOTTLE

Britten said he had told Mr. Hoover he was confident that the bill he had in mind, providing a tax of 3 or 4 cents a pint on beer, would bring in $35,000,000 a month right from the start."

He maintained this would allow the retailing of beer at 10 cents a bottle.

Britten added:

"I am quite confident that New Year's Eve will be celebrated with real beer rather than poor wine. If the Democrats will live up to their platform for 'immediate' modification, a bill could be brought up on the second day of Congress and under a special rule limiting debate on either side to 20 minutes, could be passed through the House by December 10."

MILLIGAN CONFIDENT

Representative Milligan, of Missouri, assistant Democratic whip in the House, in a statement today said the short session should pass on a repeal resolution and an amendment to modify the Volstead act. He added:

"Whether a two-thirds vote can be mustered for repeal is questionable in this Congress.

"It is my opinion that a majority vote neded to modify the Volstead act can be obtained in the December session."

Hymns of Drys to Hail Opening of Congress

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Militant drys today revealed their plan to invade the Capitol Plaza to the tune of stirring hymns during the first week of Congress with a mighty protest against anti-prohibition legislation.

Adopting the tactics of the bonus and hunger marchers, the drys plan to protest while Congress is in the midst of debate over legalization of beer and repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

The protest meeting will be a part of the "resist repeal" convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America, which will be held December 9-12. Speakers will include Gov. John C. Winant, of New Hampshire; Fred B. Perkins, of Rhode Island; Mrs. Ella A. Boole, president of the W. C. T. U.; Bishops E. G. Richardson and Edwin H. Hughes, Col. Patrick H. Callahan, Sergt. Alvin C. York and Prohibition Director Amos W. W. Woodcock.

In a joint statement, Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals; Mrs. Izora Scott, of the W. C. T. U., and F. Scott McBride, of the Anti-Saloon League, denied the election carried a wet mandate.

The drys agreed to fight all wet proposals, reopen a campaign for fundamental principles, urge that public schools teach the ill effects of alcohol, a new campaign for total abstinence pledges, and instruction to the youth of the moral effects of liquor.

DEBT CUT PLEA BELIEVED DOOMED BY FOES IN CONGRESS

PRESIDENTIAL PARLEY SEEN AS FUTILE

Answer to European Appeal Expected To Be 'No'

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The American answer to Europe's plea for debt postponement and further cancellation probably will be dispatched this week, and there is little doubt that it will be "no."

There is not an influential member of either House or Senate who counsels any other course, and without congressional approval neither the Hoover administration nor the Roosevelt administration which succeeds it next March can make a move to meet Europe's demands.

HINT PARLEY FUTILE

President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt will meet tomorrow to go over the situation, but admittedly there is little they can do in the face of congressional sentiment that is literally overwhelming against any further cancellation of the debts.

Pending his conference with his successor, President Hoover is withholding decision whether to recommend to Congress the recreation of the war debt funding commission. His present inclination is to do so, and then advise the debtor nations that he has proposed an avenue of relief, leaving it entirely up to Congress and the oncoming new administration.

In that event, it is likely the proposal will die in Congress—just as it did a year ago when Mr. Hoover requested the revival of the commission to consider revision of the debt agreements.

Roosevelt 'Crams' for Talk With Hoover on Debts

By RAYMOND I. BORST
International News Service.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Nov. 21.—After a careful study over the week-end of the international debt problem, President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt said today he was "ready" for his conference at the White House tomorrow with President Hoover.

The Governor will motor to his New York City home this afternoon. Tonight he is expected to have his final conference with Prof. Raymond Moley, of Columbia University, who will act as his adviser at the conference.

Leaving New York at 10 a. m. tomorrow, the President-elect will arrive in Washington at 3:30 p. m., going directly to the White House.

SILENT ON DEBTS

Efforts to induce Mr. Roosevelt to give some indication of what his attitude would be toward an extension of the moratorium have proved futile. His friends have indicated, however, that he is opposed to such action.

In order to consult with Democratic leaders of Congress, and possibly some of the Progressives, the President-elect will remain in Washington until Wednesday afternoon. He plans to leave there about 2 o'clock for Warm Springs, Ga., where he will rest for the next two weeks.

It was hinted by some of the Governor's associates that he will advise the Democratic members of Congress to co-operate with President Hoover in attempting to balance the national budget.

He refused to comment on the President's announcement that the federal budget would be slashed to the tune of $700,000,000.

Czechoslovakia Asks Moratorium on Debts

'TAXERS' PERIL CITY PAYROLL

A new threat to the city payroll has developed in the form of the Citizens' Committee appointed by City Council to find new sources of city tax revenue.

Instead of seeking for more persons to pay taxes, as the committee was supposed to do, the group has surprised everyone by demanding payroll statistics and launching an economy drive on a big scale.

W. P. Witherow, chairman of the committee, has admitted the nine men working with him are interested first in "broad questions" of economy. He has sent for annual comparative figures on the payroll by departments.

This all has an ominous note for the payroll, which breathed a sigh of relief when the word came down that the budget would leave the Mayor's office with payroll items virtually untouched.

CATHOLIC MEN MEET HERE

One hundred representative Catholic laymen of the United States gathered in the Hotel Schenley this morning for the opening session of the National Council of Catholic Men.

Social, economic and welfare problems were to be discussed.

Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, of the Pittsburgh diocese, in welcoming the delegates, said:

"You are not urging new things on the world. You are urging the oldest and sanest principle of life."

Two other bishops were in attendance. Bishop Joseph Schrembs, of Cleveland, and Bishop Joseph Rummel, of Omaha. Joseph H. Reiman, of Pittsburgh, presided at the opening session.

TRY PHYSICIAN IN GIRL'S DEATH

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Dr. Richard E. Thacker, a former army physician, went on trial here today on a charge of murder for the death of Ruth Hall, 22-year-old Bethany (Okla.) girl.

Denver Grigsby, assistant county attorney, said he had witnesses by whom he expected to show that Dr. Thacker was responsible for criminal operations which resulted in the deaths of four women last March and April.

The physician also is charged with the murder of Robbie Low Thompson, a young telegraph company employe, and his name was linked by officers in their investigation of one of two co-ed deaths.

Defense attorneys were expected to advance the contention that Miss Hall was treated by some other person before she came to Dr. Thacker.

SACCO MYSTERY MAN QUITS PEN

NAPLES, Italy, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Mario Buda, also known as Mike Boda, "mystery man" of the Sacco-Vanzetti case, was released on Saturday from the penal colony on Ponza Island and sent back to his home in Savignano, having completed a five-year sentence for anti-Fascist activities.

According to his own story, Buda was a close associate of Sacco and Vanzetti, who were executed for murder in Massachusetts several years ago.

He slipped away from the United States in 1920, worked as a shoemaker in Italy, and was arrested two days before Sacco and Vanzetti were put to death. Edward H. James, of Concord, Mass., has visited him twice in prison in an effort to return Buda to America to establish the innocence of Sacco and Vanzetti.

Hit-Run Auto Kills Man, 70; Son Accused

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Harry Goldberger, 35, today stood charged with being the driver of an automobile which struck and killed his father, Kalman Goldberger, 70, and then sped away.

Police said the elder Goldberger was walking along the edge of the highway when he was struck from behind by his son's car.

Herriot's Train Flagged As Blast Wrecks Track

PARIS, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Premier Edouard Herriot and a large official party arrived in Paris safe and sound today despite an apparent attempt to blow up their special train in Brittany during the night.

The railroad track was blown up with dynamite at Ingrandes, 15 miles from Nantes early yesterday just before the special train reached the spot, and in time for section men to flag it.

For several hours the Premier was unaware of the violence that might have caused his death. When he reached the capital today he said "Breton autonomists" were to blame for the explosion.

Unruffled by the excitement, the premier went ahead with a scheduled address at Nantes celebrating the four hundredth anniversary of the union of Brittany and France.

When he arrived today the head of the French government in characteristic fashion referred to his narrow escape in a whimsical vein. He referred to Moliere's play "femme savantes," and added: "While sleeping I had a narrow escape."

Seven Breton autonomists were arrested in Nantes, but none was connected with the plot.

SUBPENA STOCK OF 6 UTILITIES

HARRISBURG, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Institution of receivership proceedings in New York against the Associated Gas and Electric Company today resulted in a state Senate Committee subpena for all securities held by six Pennsylvania subsidiary operating companies.

The securities are to be produced in Harrisburg November 30, by Northern Pennsylvania Power Company, Metropolitan Edison Company, Clarion River Power Company, Pennsylvania Electric Company, Sullivan County Electric Company and Portage Light and Power Company.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The Associated Gas and Electric Company, billion dollar public utilities holding corporation, filed an order in Supreme Court today requiring Philip Newbold, a stockholder, to show cause on Wednesday why he should not be permanently restrained from pressing a receivership action against the company in this judicial district.

JOB INSURANCE PLAN OFFERED TO A. F. L.

Proposes Employers Pay Bill, With U. S. Administrator

CINCINNATI, O., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—In an epochal step, the American Federation of Labor's executive committee today submitted a plan of compulsory unemployment insurance, proposing it be adopted by every state, paid for by employers, and administered by a state commission.

Under the plan, benefits would not be denied those out of work in trade disputes, or if non-membership in a labor union was a condition of employment.

Recognizing that conditions vary in different states, the plan recommends enactment of a federal law to supplement state legislation.

The plan was contained in the report of the executive council to the federation's fifty-second annual convention, which opened today.

The report also expressed opposition to a sales tax; urged a seven-point economic government program to secure a more equitable distribution of income; advocated restoration of former wage scales of government employes; asked modification of the Volstead act, and advocated action against extended use of convict labor and a strong stand to secure enactment of the child labor amendment.

On modification, the report said indications are that action to legalize real beer will be taken at the short session of Congress convening December 5.

The report says there "is no general movement to increase wages," and that "if capitalism is to continue, it must pay the price of economic security for the producers."

Under the council's plan, the insurance would be paid for in contributions of not less than 3 per cent of the total payroll of the individual employer, and invested in Federal securities. No insurance company would be permitted to participate.

The scope of the coverage would include clerical as well as manual workers and the insurance in general would cover temporary and involuntary unemployment.

RUTH JUDD PLEA FOR LIFE OPENS

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Oral arguments in the appeal of Winnie Ruth Judd from her conviction and death sentence for the murder of Agnes Ann LeRoi begin before the Supreme Court of Arizona today.

Mrs. Judd is represented by five attorneys. Attorney General K. Berry Peterson and his assistant, J. R. McDougal will present the state's arguments.

Defense attorneys said they would base their case on 12 separate assignments of error. Among the principal alleged errors, they said, will be cited the refusal of the trial court to give instructions on the law of self-defense as requested by the defense; the alleged refusal of the court to grant a new trial on the asserted disqualification of a juror, and the claim the court erroneously instructed the jury on Arizona law concerning insanity.

Mrs. Judd also is under indictment for the slaying of Hedvig Samuelson.

PARTIES UNITED ON BUDGET CUT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—A united campaign to slash federal government costs was under way today with administration officials and returning members of Congress, regardless of party, pledging their support.

President Hoover had set $550,000,000 as the net economy goal of the executive branch, reached by deducting $150,000,000 in fixed charges from a $700,000,000 cut in current expenditures.

The presidential budget of four billion odd dollars, it was reported, eliminates the $322,000,000 provided for public construction last year to provide employment, and cuts other construction items. Many members of Congress insist these amounts be increased rather than diminished, and they predicted a battle for appropriation of additional funds for direct unemployment relief.

The budget, it was made known, provides for no reductions in the $1,000,000,000 outlay of the Veterans' Bureau.

NEW DUPLICATE BRIDGE CODE

CLEVELAND, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—A new code of bridge rules governing duplicate contract tournament bridge and pivot and progressive contract was agreed upon today by the American Bridge League, the United States Bridge Association and the American Whist League.

As explained by William E. McKenney, secretary of the American Bridge League, the most important change in the new duplicate code is the partial score bonus. This provides for 100 points bonus for successfully making a less-than-game contract.

A new scoring count will be adopted, namely clubs and diamonds, 20, hearts and spades, 30, and no trump the first, third, fifth and seventh odd tricks 30 points each, and the second, fourth and sixth odd tricks 40 points each.

It will be necessary to bid and make game in one hand to receive the game premiums, which are: Three hundred points if declarer's side is not vulnerable, and 500 points if declarer's side is vulnerable.

Bonuses of 1,000 and 1,500 for grand slams, not vulnerable and vulnerable, and 500 and 750 for small slams, were retained.

CHINA SCORES JAP STAND ON MANCHURIA

Self-Defense Claim Assailed Before League Council

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

GENEVA, Nov. 21.—In a fervent denunciation of Japan's alleged "premeditated" military invasion of Manchuria, Dr. Wellington Koo, chief Chinese delegate to the League of Nations Council, this afternoon challenged Japan's claim she acted in self-defense and demanded reparations "for the tens of thousands of innocent lives and billions of dollars lost."

Dr. Koo's speech was in answer to the address of Yosuke Matsuoka, Japanese delegate, who invoked the Kellogg pact in all its varied interpretations to support Japan's claim that she acted in self-defense in the attack on Mukden in September, 1931.

Koo stated that Japan had no right to assume that the internal condition of China could justify the Mukden incident, and asked the League Council to bar Japan's invocation of the Kellogg pact.

The Chinese delegate demanded that the Manchukuo government immediately come to an end, and warned the Council that Japan's insistence the status quo remain is "a challenge to the League."

Matsuoka, special Japanese delegate to the League of Nations Council, pulled a silk glove over the mailed first of Japan revealed in her official comment on the Llytton Manchurian report.

In his speech before the council, instead of bluntly refusing to discuss the report, he asked for patience, and made a direct attempt to reopen the entire question precipitated in September, 1931, when Japanese troops invaded Manchuria.

PART OF TESTIMONY

It was evident he wished to treat the Lytton report as merely part of the testimony in the case. He complimented the report, but declared he refused to accept it as conclusive.

He made it clear that Japan has no intention of changing her policy in Manchuria, which includes recognition of her puppet state, Manchukuo, regardless of what action the league council may take.

American intervention in Mexico was cited today by Matsuoka as a precedent for Japan's activities in Manchuria. He said:

"The United States took action in Mexico such as Japan took outside the railway zones in Manchuria. In both cases, the action was designed to protect our Nationals."

ROBINS PLEDGE TOLD BY GIRL

had offered to send her to college Wilma said:

"Why yes, he told us all he would like to send me away to school, and sister, too."

Wilma further said she spoke with him alone a few minutes before he left Saturday morning for Asheville to await arrival of Mrs. Robins. She added:

"What took place was between Reynolds and myself. It was a perfectly satisfactory farewell."

She was asked:

"When did he say he was going to see you again?"

"That is another one of those questions that the public has no business to know."

WIFE PLANS THIRD VISIT

A buxom mountain beauty with cheeks rouged by nature, Wilma was attired in red coat, trimmed with black fox fur, a knitted sweater jacket, taupe silk hose and brown sport shoes.

Meanwhile, here in Asheville, the nervous little wife of the dry leader was planning her third visit to the man she claims is undoubtedly her husband.

She hopes that on one of these visits the sight of her, together with some event she recalls, may bring back his memory.

John Dreier, the nephew, who first identified Rogers as the missing dry crusader, said today:

"Mrs. Robins and I both are absolutely convinced that this man is Col. Robins. There is not the slightest doubt in either of our minds."

Ellenbogen Eligibility Studied by Pinchot

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot said today the election of Henry Ellenbogen to the House of Representatives from the Thirty-third Pennsylvania District "raised an interesting question" and that he would "look into it" before issuing a certificate of election.

In the event of a special session of Congress, starting March 4, Ellenbogen, elected on the Democratic ticket over Harry A. Estep, Republican, apparently would be ineligible to take his seat.

Ellenbogen will not have been a citizen for seven years, as required by law, until next June.

There has been speculation as to whether, in event of a special session, the Governor could declare a vacancy and order a special election.

BOY MANIAC AND 'MODEL YOUTH' ADMIT BRUTAL K"LINGS

CHICAGO SEEKS QUICK JUSTICE FOR 'IGGY'

Indictments Returned As He Boasts Insanity

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Chicago today sought speedy retribution for the murders, attacks and holdups of which James (Iggy the Bad One) Varecha boasted.

In record time the grand jury returned indictments charging the youth with murder, robbery and assault with intent to kill. The swaggering confessed killer was charged with the slaying of Frank Jordan, World War veteran; the shooting of James R. McElligott in a holdup, and the robbery of James Guisinger, 23, escort of Miss Lillian Henry, 20, attacked by the ruthless gunman.

James Varecha

Prosecutors immediately prepared to have Varecha arraigned in Criminal Court this afternoon in an attempt to send him to the electric chair without delay.

Varecha boasted that the state will never succeed in "giving me the hot seat." The young desperado coolly announced:

"I'll say I'm crazy. I've been sent to the Dixon Hospital twice and you can't get around that. I'm insane."

STATE TO FIGHT

But the state already was laying the groundwork to combat any claim of insanity. Already it had the word of two well-known alienists that young Verecha is not only sane, but "of an advanced mentality," to boot. The two psychiatrists—Dr. Harry Hoffman, head of the Criminal Court Behavior Clinic, and Dr. H. Douglas Singer, chief of the mental staff of the Edward Mines, Jr., Veterans' Hospital—announced their findings after having the youthful criminal under observation for two hours while he recited his amazing tale of offenses against society. The psychiatrists said:

"He is cunning, and if he was ever pronounced feeble-minded, he shammed that mental attitude."

Captured in a theater after he had vainly tried to buy a revolver with which to kill himself, Varecha, who claims to be 17 years old, but who is much older, according to the police, broke under the strain of 18 hours of continuous grilling to admit that he was the youth who staged a reign of terror in the southwest district last Wednesday night.

CONFESSES CRIMES

During that orgy of crime, he confessed, he murdered Jordan, a salesman, as he sat beside Miss Emma Dahmke in a parked automobile. Then a half hour later he came upon another parked automobile in which Miss Henry sat chatting with Guisinger. He bound and gagged Guisinger, trundled him into the rumble seat and attacked Miss Henry, a niece of former Police Commissioner John Alcock.

Among the other crimes admitted by Varecha was an attack on Helen Brabniak after abducting her from the side of a male escort last August 31. Both Miss Brabniak and Miss Henry identified Varecha.

The two other murders to which the young desperado confessed were the killing of "an old man on the southwest side," and a Mexican, who was one of a party of 20 of his countrymen into whose ranks Varecha fired.

YOUNG SLAYER EMBRACED BY STEPMOTHER

Killed Aged Woman Who Refused Him Use of Auto

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Charles Bertrand Arnold, Jr., 16-year-old "model boy" who confessed to the murder of his step-grandmother, was returned to Chicago early today to be embraced by his stepmother in a dramatic meeting.

Mrs. C. B. Arnold and her husband, wealthy Chicago manufacturer and father of the youth, were waiting at police headquarters when Cook County officials arrived by automobile from Mount Carroll with the young prisoner.

EMBRACES STEPSON

When the boy, unshackled, was conducted into the room where Mrs. Arnold sat, the woman opened her arms sympathetically and, with tears streaming down her cheeks, embraced the stepson who killed her 60-year-old mother, Mrs. Ellen O. Saxe.

The father, who had stoutly maintained that his son could not have been capable of the slaying, stood nearby as his wife and the boy embraced. He restrained his emotions with great difficulty.

In a hurried dash through the night, the Cook County officials returned the lad from Mt. Carroll, 134 miles west of Chicago, where last night he signed a confession, admitting that he bludgeoned his step-grandmother to death with a hammer in their suburban Riverside home Friday night. He killed the elderly woman, according to the confession, in a blind burst of anger because she refused to permit him the use of her automobile and slapped his face.

BODY IN CISTERN

Then, after vainly searching for someone to aid him in disposing of the body, the boy confessed, he dragged the corpse to an old cistern in the rear yard and flung it in.

Ending a dramatic hunt, the youth, a good student of a Riverside high school and popular among young churchgoers, was captured in Stockton, 20 miles north of Mount Carroll last night. He was found in a restaurant kitchen where he was earning a bowl of soup by peeling potatoes.

At first he denied his identity, but later, while he was being brought to Mount Carroll in an automobile, he began to weep and cried out:

"I killed her. I don't know why. I just went out of my head, I guess."

The boy's confession was made to State's Attorney Ralph Eaton and Sheriff Harry Shiley, of Carroll County.

U. S. 'IN WAY'; WILL SEE SHAW

LONDON, Nov. 21.—(Universal)—George Bernard Shaw isn't paying the United States the honor of a visit next year. He's going there because he can't tour the world without it getting in the way.

This the Irish playwright and critic of the world's foibles carefully explained yesterday. He said:

"You can't cruise around the world without banging into the United States. I don't want it to be understood I am paying a visit there.

"I shall first bang into the United States at Los Angeles, go through the Panama Canal, and then call in at New York."

Shaw leaves Britain on the Empress of Britain in time to be in the Holy Land for Christmas. He and Mrs. Shaw will debark long enough in the Orient to fly across the Great Wall of China.

MALMO, Sweden, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Back in Sweden after a short trip to London and Paris, Greta Garbo expressed disgust with the manner in which she said she was "persecuted" in those cities.

Miss Garbo used a black wig, horn-rimmed spectacles and other stage properties in efforts to avoid curious crowds in the European capitals. But Parisians found out where she was staying in that city and hundreds besieged her hotel.

Saturday night Sademan, who had a severe cold, took a large dose of a drug. His condition grew worse, however, and pneumonia developed, aggravated by the overdose of the drug, it was said.

The ceremony went on, however, at the bride's rome, 300 West North avenue. As Sademan lay in bed, Miss Feely stood by his side and the two were pronounced man and wife.

Makes 'Date' With Girl, Arrests Her in Theft

Katherine McClaren, 22, of 1007 Gibbon street; Clyde Griffith, 24, of 1618 Dagmar avenue, and Robert Messinger, 34, of 2720 Bellingham street, were held for court today charged with stealing clothing and jewelry from the home of W. C. Lorah, of 261 Ashland avenue, Mt. Lebanon, during a party Thursday night, according to police. They were arrested by Capt. John Swoager who made a "date" with the McClaren girl.

Lorah reported to police he knew Griffiths, but did not know his address. When Capt. Swoager learned the McClaren girl left a telephone number at the house he called her up and arranged a "date." He arrested her on sight and later picked up her two alleged companions.

Lorah said the trio came to his home Thursday night, and during the evening tossed clothing and jewelry from a window, retrieving it later. When Griffith reached home with three suits and a top coat, he told police his mother forced him to return them. Finding Lorah out, he left them at a neighbor's home.

EIGHT OF FIRM FREE IN ARSON CHARGES

Morris Robbins, of 5295 Forbes street, one of the proprietors of I. Robbins Company, wholesale novelty dealers, and seven of the company's employes were discharged in Central Police Court today when arraigned in connection with a fire that caused $15,000 damage to the Robbins store. All were charged with being suspicious persons. Fire Marshal Thomas L. Pfarr, on whose order the men were arrested, did not appear at the hearing, but was represented by Deputy Fire Marshal C. A. Lippert.

In addition to Robbins, the men discharged were James Kruth, Harmarville; Martin Schwartz, 1804 Wylie avenue; Sam Gordon, 525 Overhill street; Morris Silverman, 801 Bryn Mawr road; Morris Levine, 415 Grove street; Fred Sweitzer, 311 Carrick street, and Ben Weinerman, 117 Erin street.

Detective Sigmund Gorsky, of the bomb and arson squad, asked for their discharge because of lack of evidence. He said:

"I could find no evidence of incendiarism and neither could Fire Marshall Pfarr."

Gorsky said the arrests had been made at the request of the fire marshal, after a fire on October 22. At that time Pfarr said he had received a tip that the place was to be fired. He said he had men watching the building for 18 days.

Lippert testified that on the morning of the fire he did not see any person entering or leaving the building and Fire Chief George Spahr testified he could find no evidence of incendiarism.

'SOLID CITIZEN' DESCRIBES HIS TERM IN WORKHOUSE

SERVING TIME 'UP THE RIVER' DESCRIBED

[Note—For years luxuries were his—then came the depression, financial collapse and his first term in Allegheny County's workhouse. Well educated, sensitive, his "time up the river" became a personal drama which, of course anonymously, he tells Sun-Telegraph readers. There's the charm of experience, of reality in the following. It deals with the men—official and prisoner, in his words. The second and concluding article will appear tomorrow.—Editor.]

The majority of newspaper readers are good, solid citizens who have their ups and downs, and keep out of trouble in the main, and all they know about prisons is that they are places where violators of the laws are sent for punishment, and that a certain portion of the taxes goes to the maintenance of these institutions, for the good of society.

I am one of these former good citizens who enjoyed a good income and participated in the business, club and social life of the community for the past decade, enjoying most of the common luxuries of the times, doing as I pleased without thought of restraint or discipline. But unfortunately the combination of financial disaster, generally known as the depression, suddenly decided on me and whisked away my income, business, automobiles and home, and I found myself penniless and in debt. As things went from bad to worse I got into legal difficulties and was finally sentenced to a term in the Allegheny County workhouse for an unpaid hotel bill.

A True Picture

In serving this sentence I learned first hand how things are done in this institution, which is no doubt typical of other prisons in the land. It occurred to me many readers would be interested in these matters. Therefore this article is written, not with any intention of criticism or reform, nor of praise to stimulate emulation, nor of any personal ax to grind, whatever. It is intended to be simply a picture of the prison routine, with certain observations and reactions as they occurred to me.

I was delivered to the prison by the Sheriff's deputy with three other prisoners from Pittsburgh, one of whom was a Negro woman who was in tears, and I was handcuffed to the two male prisoners—one a Negro—the other a white boy. The handcuffs were removed at the prison office, and we were required to turn over to the guard all money, tobacco and matches. We were then locked up in a cage to await the arrival of other prisoners from other portions in the state. There was a lone Negro in the adjoining cage, and we found upon inquiry he was being released that day, but having lost his handkerchief issued to him by the workhouse upon his entry there, he was being detained in the cage till 4 p. m. as a final punishment, instead of being released in the morning.

Upon the arrival of the last of the other prisoners from outside points, our group, now numbering about 15 or more, was marched down to the bathroom, where we were lined up on a bench and ordered to strip and put our clothes into burlap bags which were provided, and the small trinkets, such as pocket knives, etc., into smaller bags. Jewelry (if any) was turned in to the guard.

Prison Haircut

The barbers now proceeded to clip off all our hair, just as we sat on the bench, an operation which required very little time. Meanwhile, the showers were turned on, and we were provided with scrub brushes and soap, and instructed each to scrub the back of the one in front, white, black, or "what have you?" This was done with varying degrees of vigor and thoroughness, according to the mood of the scrubber. The bath over, each prisoner went back to his place at the bench and donned the prison uniform which had been laid out for him. This consists of heavy cotton shirt, pants and socks, supplemented in cold weather by a two-piece suit of canton flannel underwear, and a cotton coat. A cotton cap and pair of brogans complete the ensemble.

Being outfitted, the kitchen crew now brought us each a plate of dinner and copious supply of the famous prison bread, cut in slices of husky thickness. It was here that we received our first hint as to the value and scarcity of matches within the prison.

Next we were assembled and the prison rules were read to us, and we were assigned individually to our future places of employment. My educational and occupational qualifications being perhaps above the average, I was considered unsuitable for manual labor, and given a loafing job as clerk in one of the shops, which turned out to be a pleasant if not very arduous occupation, and I am grateful for having been assigned to a very good "boss."

Industries Varied

There is a chair shop, broom shop, rug department and rag room, shoe shop and laundry, doing productive work for sale to the public, as well as the shops chiefly devoted to maintenance of the prison, such as the kitchen, boiler room, barber shop, tailor shop, carpenter shop, blacksmith shop, plumbing shop, tin shop, paint shop, etc. The library and mail department, rangers and scrubbers about completes the employment activities, and those left over constitute the "bum-gang," who have no regular work, but go out in the yard and walk, and do miscellaneous occasional laboring jobs.

After being assigned to work the next step is to assign each prisoner to a cell which becomes his home for the term of his confinement. He is given a serial number and a cell number, is provoded with a clean sheet, pillow case, blanket and aluminum cup and shown to his cell, and thereafter he is known by his cell number, as Z-62 or K-2, except to his closer associates who may recognize his individuality sufficiently to call him Bill, or Pete, or Bad Eye, or Dizzy, or Slim.

The cell is a steel and concrete room about 5 by 10 feet inside, containing washbowl, toilet, bunk, folding steel table and chair. The mattress and pillow are straw-filled, and the bunks are made of steel strips, with no springs. But much to my relief I found my cell scrupulously clean, and did not see a single bed bug or roach at any time while I was there. (This is in extreme contrast with the Allegheny County Jail, where I spent a few days prior to my transfer to the workhouse. This jail is overrun with vermin.)

Cell Block Layouts

Perhaps a brief description of the cell blocks would be in order here, though they are probably alike in chief particulars in all prisons. There are three of them in this prison, not including the female department, known as the East, West and North wings, each branching off from the central building. The North wing contains eight ranges of 60 cells each, four high and two wide. The cell block is a large enclosure completely composed of steel jail bars which extend from floor to roof. Inside this enclosure are the eight ranges of cells, with aisles passing in front of the cells of each range. The ranges are connected by stairs at one end, and separated by locked gates through which the guards pass at regular intervals to see that all is well. A rangeman and a scrubber looks after the requirements of the prisoners on each range, passing out "hot-stuff," bread, water, lights, etc., as required and allowed, and also keeping their range clean.

The routine prison day starts with the whistle at 5:30 a. m., when each prisoner must get up, dress, and put his bunk up against the wall. Then the rangeman and scrubber come along with "hot-stuff" and bread. The "hot stuff" is weak coffee with a little milk in it, and each prisoner holds his tin-cup to the bars and gets it filled.

The breadman gives to each one as many slices of bread as he asks for, but bread must not be wasted at any time under penalty of punishment, and if you take four slices you must eat four. This is all you get for breakfast, and is never varied.

At 11:30 a. m., all file into the dining room, each taking with him his plate of dinner which is issued as he passes through an ante chamber. The dinners are usually plentiful and passably good. For instance on one day we will have a cake of hamburger, mashed potatoes and gravy, baked lima beans, and cole slaw, with the inescapable bread—all you can eat, but subject to the above mentioned restrictions on wasting. There is seldom any dessert or sweets of any kind, but on Halloween, to the surprise of all, we had pumpkin pie.

After dinner we go to our cells again for an hour's smoking period, and during this time the mail man comes with his messages, if such there be. Then back to the shop at 1 p. m., and at 4:30, the supper lineup the same as dinner, except that they never have much for supper, only one dish each day. We have, say vegetable soup one day, rice and milk the next, and chocolate corn starch pudding the next. Plenty of bread is provided at all times.

After supper, we go back to our cells and are locked in for the night at about 5 p. m. The guards pass through and make the final count, after which there is a one-hour talking period during which the prisoners are allowed to yell at each other.

Plenty of Static

When they run out of conversation, they sing, each a different air, all at the same time, and the din is so loud that it is almost impossible to read or even think. It is a great relief to the majority when this period ends, and the radio starts. Meanwhile, the third and last smoking period of the day is in progress. The radio program continues until about 8:45. The lights are are turned out about a half hour before this, so that it is impossible to read, and nearly everyone is in bed by the time the radio stops, bringing the activities of the day to a close.

Reading Preferences

Every Saturday afternoon is recreation period. The whole crowd goes out in the yard for two hours. There are several mushball games, and the boys who are not playing can walk around, or sit on the ground in the sun or shade as they prefer. During this period when all have a chance to mix together, there is a general exchange of magazines.

Western stories and detective magazines seem to be the popular choice, and they are traded around, glued up, repaired and retraded until they are so torn and greasy as to be no longer legible. Really good popular magazines never make their appearance in the Saturday trading. The few who are fortunate enough to obtain magazines of this class direct from the publishers treasure them highly and pass them on to their close friends only.

At the end of recreation the boys file in and each receives his dish of prunes or dried peaches and a supply of bread, and takes it to his cell. Sunday is the long day they all dread, for unless they go to church, they remain all day in the cells. There is a Catholic service first, and then a Protestant service. Neither service is compulsory, but those who go to the Protestant service file from the chapel into the dining-room for dinner, while those who do not go to church must eat alone in their cells.

Church Services

The Catholic service is a simple mass without altar boys, incense, or choir, followed by a short address delivered in a friendly and human way by the young priest, who seems very sincere. He is trying, I understand, at his own expense, to provide each member of his flock with a rosary and prayer book. I am not a Catholic, but I could not fail to observe how the church reaches out in its inimitable way for the spiritual welfare of its followers even in the prison.

The Protestant service is presided over by the prison chaplain. The service is mostly music and there is a prison orchestra and choir composed of the available material of mixed color and nationality. There is a woman pianist.

The personnel of the orchestra of course, changes as prisoners come and go, but when I was there it consisted of several violins, a saxophone, trombone cornet, clarinet, drum, and one of those large contraptions which I believe are called French horns. The performance of the orchestra is really creditable, although to my untutored ear it seemed as though there was an occasional discordant strain among the fiddles. One day there was a violin solo by a Negro of the orchestra who played Humoresque, with accompaniment by the pianist (who by the way is not a convict).

This selection happens to be one of my favorites and I have heard it many times played by artists. Therefore I was over-critical, and the mistakes were many, but I am sure no artist ever played it more earnestly. At the finish there was a round of applause from the congregation.

INDUSTRIAL LEADERS -:- 'Share-Work' Drive Addresses -:- ON THE AIR TONIGHT

Sloan, Teagle Broadcast Job Plea

Two of America's leading industrialists are heard over WCAE as they address a dinner meeting of the Share-the-Work movement, designated to promote a wider distribution of the nation's payrolls, in New York tonight. The speakers, going on the air from the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, are Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors, who also acts as toastmaster, and Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. The broadcast is scheduled for half an hour, beginning at 8:30 p. m.

Mr. Sloan

A novel broadcast conducted by Orestes H. Caldwell, president of the New York Electrical Society, and Dr. Clayton H. Sharp, internationally-known scientist, during which an exact replica of a radio detector tube invented 50 years ago by Thomas A. Edison figures prominently, is presented over KDKA at 10:30 tonight. Edison, 40 years before broadcasting was known, discovered electronic flow in a vacuum tube, the principle which underlies all radio apparatus today.

Program Pointers

Helen Corbin Heinl, Washington concert pianist, is heard as guest soloist with Josef Pasternack and his Melody Moments orchestra on KDKA at 9:30. Mrs. Heinl is the only pianist who has ever played as a guest artist on this program, tonight marking her third appearance in that capacity. She was first starred on Melody Moments during Thanksgiving week two years ago. As highlights of the broadcast she plays Liszt's "Liebestraum" and Chopin's "Butterfly Etude" and the Valse in E minor.

Mrs. Heinl

The "Contented Hour" returning to the air after an absence of three weeks in deference to political broadcasts, moves to a new hour—10 p. m.—tonight. As a feature of the program, George Bass, violinist, accompanied by a chorus, plays Kreisler's "Caprice Viennois."

A gala program marking the Wiener Minstrels' two-hundredth broadcast is listed on KDKA at 9. In honor of the occasion, Carroll Martin, of the band, introduces a brand new trombone "smear."

The El Toro All-Star Revue, with Gus Van, the Pickens Sisters and Victor Arden's Orchestra, formerly heard Saturdays at 9 p. m., inaugurates a Monday at 8 schedule on KDKA tonight.

The Boswells "harlemize," singing "Minnie the Moocher's Wedding Day" with Nat Shilkret's Orchestra at 10 on WJAS. As an additional highlight, Nat offers a novelty arrangement of "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?"

That diabolical Oriental villain, Dr. Fu Manchu, sets a new record for cunning and unscrupulous slaughter during tonight's Fu Manchu mystery story—WJAS at 8:45.

Lord Peel on Air From London

Answering Lord Ponsonby's "To an Old School Friend" talk broadcast internationally over CBS-WJAS from London last Monday, Lord Peel speaks over the same facilities at 4:20 p. m. today.

Children's Program On WCAE Today

A special program for the children is presented from the studios of WCAE today at 4:45 under the direction of Jane A. White, assistant curator of education at Carnegie Museum.

Louis L. Kaufman, Globe-Trotter of the Sun-Telegraph and Hearst Metrotone News, flashes the latest news to WCAE and WJAS dialers direct from the Sun-Telegraph editorial rooms today at 9:05 a. m., 12:15 p. m., 2:15 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. His schedule tomorrow is the same with the exception of the 2:15 period, listed on WCAE only.

Ted Weems Opens New Dance Series

Ted Weems opens a new weekly series of dance programs over NBC-WCAE at 11 tonight, starring, in addition to his famed band, Andrea Marsh, "Country" Washburn, Parker Gibbs, "Red" Engle and Weston Vaughn, all of whom are familiar to Weems fans.

LISTENING IN: News and Gossip of Radioland

That soft, southern voice designated on WCAE as being that of stylist Jean Abbey, belongs to Ethel Garber Walter, frequently heard on the air in various programs . . . Mrs. Walter, who has been connected with both New York and Pittsburgh department stores in publicity, fashion and executive capacities, has served as president of the Women's Advertising Club of Pittsburgh and is a member of the Women's Overseas Club. During her service with the American Red Cross overseas, she was decorated by the Rumanian and Greek governments, and was entertained by Queen Marie at friendly little tea-cup chats in the Queen's boudoir. The sovereign's interest in Mrs. Walter was aroused by the marked resemblance between them.

Mrs. Walter

Mrs. Ora Nichols, CBS sound-effects expert, had to have a person talking from a submerged submarine on a recent program . . . tough assignment, isn't it? . . . She claims that if you speak through a megaphone into a microphone placed at the bottom of an ashcan, you can do the trick.

Rosaline Greene, the actress, is credited with saving two lives: One, a drowning man, and the other, a college sorority sister overcome by gas.

Connie, Vet and Martha Boswell dropped into a music store not long ago to get some sheet music . . . and wound up by buying a new grand piano . . . Incidentally, the trio won't have their Thanksgiving dinner until 11 p. m. Thursday, because they have a program at 9 p. m. and rehearsal for two hours in the afternoon.

Vaughn de Leath returns to Baltimore shortly for a week's vaude engagement . . . Harry von Zell, the announcer, has a remarkably good singing voice.

The Funnyboners have been using the same taxi for more than 10 days. They have to journey back and forth between the studios and Jersey City, where they're playing in vaudeville, and figure that one driver, well versed in the route, can do a better job.

Because William Hall has a twin brother on the New York police force, he's always running into something like this: The other day he was hurrying to the studios when he bumped into an inspector. Queried the official:

"Where d'ya think you're going?"

"Why, hello! I'm on the air in 10 minutes."

"You taking me for a ride? Get back to headquarters and put on your uniform."

Architect Speaks On Profession

Edward Brown Lee, architectural designer of many Pittsburgh buildings including the new City-County Building the Chamber of Commerce, Carnegie Institute of Technology and Peabody High School, discusses "The Architectural Profession of Today as Compared with that of 50 Years Ago" on KDKA at 7:45 tonight.

Will this be America's next Number One Car?

BEHIND that sleek radiator there's a big 70-horsepower engine with Patented Floating Power. The most efficient Six built, dynamometer tests reveal. Free wheeling, and an easy-shift transmission with "silentsecond." Hydraulic four-wheel brakes and rigid-X double-drop frame. Oilite (non-squeak) springs; down-draft dust-sealed carburetor with automatic heat control, and full-sized safety-steel bodies with Duplate Safety Plate Glass windshields.

It's the New Plymouth . . . a SIX at $60 less than last year! Again "Look at All Three"

JUST a week ago . . . Walter P. Chrysler announced the new Plymouth Six. Just seven days . . . but wherever you go . . . in hotels, clubs, on trains and in theatre lobbies . . . you hear people say, "Walter P. Chrysler is headed straight for the top."

"The new Plymouth Six is a coming best-seller." "It's bound to be America's next Number One Car."

Clearly, Walter P. Chrysler and his engineers knew what people wanted. They knew that the combination of a six-cylinder engine with Floating Power was unbeatable.

They knew that Americans hate to be crowded . . . so they made the new Plymouth Six a big, roomy car.

They understood human nature. We all want a car that travels fast . . . that's thrilling to drive. They made it safer than other low-priced cars . . . by giving it a safety-steel body . . . hydraulic four-wheel brakes . . . a rigid-X double-drop frame . . . and a safety-glass windshield.

They built it to set new economy records . . . in gas, oil, tires and upkeep. And, last but not least, they gave people a low-priced car without that "low-priced look."

No wonder Walter P. Chrysler invites you to drive this much talked-about automobile. No wonder he wants your answer to the intriguing question: "Will this be America's next Number One Car?"

Again he says, "Look at the new Plymouth Six! Look at All Three . . . and may the best car win!"

Varied Opinions Submitted About Working Wives

Do working wives wreck their husbands?

If brides keep on pounding at the old job, to help out, will the Big Boys lose interest in doing their part? Will they expect the Li'l Gals to not only keep on "helping out," but to actually carry all the load, while said Big Boys step around like bachelors, and spend all their earnings on themselves?

Mary had about decided they would, and she'd had experience. She had started out gladly to help her husband—and all the thanks she got for it was nagging, because she didn't do more.

"Are the men all like that?" she asked.

And we put it up to The Gang. Here are three Working Wives with plenty of ideas on the subject. We'll let Floy fire the first shot.

HUSBAND IMPOSED

"You bet they are!" sez she. "Men can't stand to have their wives work and help support the family. I guess they're just naturally grabby. Anyway, if a girl is fool enough to give them a hand with the grocery bill and the rent, they'll pretty soon get to think she's just an easy mark, and they can have a high time on the money they make, and 'let Jenny do it' on the living expenses.

"I know what I'm talking about. I tried it myself. And all the thanks I finally got out of it was a broken home. I wanted to help out, because we didn't have much money when we first married, so I kept on working. Things went fine—for a while. Then my husband would have "extra expenses" or "be a little short this month," and of course, Big Hearted Me, I'd pony up the rent, etc., until finally it got so he just forgot to pay any of the expenses unless asked to, and he began to stay away from home and spend money running around.

"Finally I got good and mad and told him where to get off—and he blamed me with the whole mess. He told me that I could take care of myself, and he was tired of being married.

ENDED WITH DIVORCE

"Well, I gave him his freedom. He's married now, to a woman who won't work—and he's a good dog. He takes good care of her. He knows he has to. And I know other couples where things worked out just about the same way. I'm still working, but, believe me! If I ever marry again, I'll stop work, pronto! Carrying part of a man's burden for him won't work out!"

I'll admit that sounds bad. Being a working wife certainly didn't work out for Floy. But how about the rest of us? Does Floy's story prove that it won't work out for any one? Here's Hattie, with a different story.

"Of course men don't always take advantage of a wife who works, or nag her because she doesn't do more!" she snorts. "That idea is all wrong. I have been a Working Wife for the last seven years, and it hasn't turned out that way for me.

"My husband and I have a regular system. We divide all the expenses equally, save a certain amount, and what's left belongs to the one who earned it. If furniture, or anything for the home, needs to be bought, we share the payment for that, too, after talking it all over and getting each other's ideas about just what we can afford, and whether we really do need it or not.

"We started out with the idea of being absolutely fair with each other. We give each other a break, and we're very happy. Out of the personal funds left over, we often treat each other to a gift or a show, or some other little thing. I guess it all depends on what kind of a man you marry."

ANOTHER OPINION

Then there's Betty, who says—

"It all depends on the way you start, and whether you stand up for yourself or not. When my husband and I started out he was working, but soon lost his job. When that happened, I carried both of us, of course. When he first began working again, he was a little inclined to think I'd keep on doing it.

"Well, I sat down one evening after he'd spent a good deal on himself and hadn't come through with anything for the house, and had a nice, friendly talk with him. I told him that my idea was that we couldn't keep on going unless we both kept up our end; that I felt he'd been just heedless and unthinking, and that keeping our home and our marriage going was just as much his lookout as mine, and I didn't think it was fair for him to expect the lion's share from me.

"That turned the trick. He saw what I meant, and he came to himself. He's done his part ever since! A little pleasant conversation sometimes clears the air, and gets things going the way they should."

So there your are! Which side are you on?

Girls, If You Don't Love a Man, Let Him Go, Says Fay King

THIS NOTE WILL BRING HIM BACK
SHE IS ONLY INTERESTED IN HIM WHEN HE IS INTERESTED IN ANOTHER GIRL
MAYBE SHE DOES PREFER ME AFTER ALL
FAY KING

By FAY KING

There is something just a little fiendish about a girl who, not really caring for a young man, still does not like to see him become interested in another girl.

Knowing that he likes her very much, and that she can win him back at any time with the least encouragement, she does so, for no other purpose than to break up his new friendship.

She just enjoys showing others how easily she could win him if she really wanted to.

If you really do not seriously care for a sincere admirer don't interfere with his friendship for another girl which may develop into love and a happy marriage.

If you don't want him, let the other girl have him. Don't break up their friendship.

Hints for the Household

Make a stuffing for tomatoes by mixing boiled rice with chopped meat, minced green pepper and celery; or omit the chopped meat, and use as a stuffing for meats or fish.

To clean and restore white enamel furniture melt one tablespoonful of bicarbonate of soda in one quart of boiling water. When cool wash the furniture with the solution, using an old flannel cloth.

Protect your mattresses with washable slip covers. You can buy them in all standard sizes ready-made, or run them up on your sewing machine. Unbleached muslin, ticking or washable cretonne are serviceable fabrics. If you make them yourself, leave one side of each cover open and fasten it with snap fasteners so that it will be easy to remove and put in the wash.

Mice are canny things and unless the trap is clean they will avoid it. After a mouse has been caught in the trap, the trap should be thoroughly scalded and dried and aired. Then all scent will be gone except the smell of the bait. If you do not care to go to all this trouble, use new traps for each mouse. Many women do not consider it extravagant to throw away the trap with the mouse still on it, rather than handle the animal.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

White placed close to the face is a trying color, brings out every pigmentary defect of the complexion. Cream and beige are kinder, more flattering. Pale shades of pink and blue are only for the extremely youthful; though the blonde darlings love them, they should fight shy of them. Navy blue is one hue that women of all ages, all colorings, can safely wear.

Spectacle wearers are likely to come to the conclusion that they're bound to look ancient. It is a fixed idea, more or less unwarranted. Glasses are so commonly worn that nobody thinks about them. Brimless ones are more popular than the owlish affairs bound with tortoise shell or whatever it is that the opticians use as frames for lenses.

Germs that cause skin eruptions may lurk elsewhere in the body—in the tonsils, intestinal tract or inflamed gums. That is why, when treatments fail to overcome a chronice case of acne the family doc should make a thorough physical examination. Skin specialists employ serums and lights, often with success when the infection is a local issue.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Permitting Opponents to Err

One of the secrets of fine Dummy play is to give the defense every possible opportunity to make a mistake. There are many otherwise fine players who know when to cross-ruff a hand, when to set up a side suit, when to play for a squeeze and when to throw the opponents in for an end-play, but some of these same splendid players fail in one of the attributes of greatness, in that they give their opponents no chance to make a mistake in defensive play. Frequently the success of a hand depends upon the Declarer so concealing his strength and distribution, and his intentions, that the defense gets a wrong idea of his holdings and plays right into his hands.

As a case in point, I am reminded of a defensive error, the situation being cleverly created by the Declarer in a recent Duplicate game. In the bidding, the Declarer obviously was playing for a swing, as otherwise his bidding was ridiculous. The play, however, created the unusual situation of the second round of a suit being won by the trey.

South—Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ Q 5 4 3 ♡ A Q 9 2 ◇ K ♣ Q 9 4 2
♠ K 9 7 ♡ 7 4 ◇ 9 8 5 4 2 ♣ A 10 6	North West East South	♠ A J 10 8 6 ♡ J 10 8 3 ◇ J ♣ K 7 5
	♠ 2 ♡ K 6 5 ◇ A Q 10 7 6 3 ♣ J 8 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N T (1)	Pass	3 N T (2)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Of course, entirely unsound. The hand should be passed, but South, a very fine player, is seeking to create a situation that will be productive of a big swing.

2—North takes full command of the situation.

With the burden of the lead, West chose his fourth-best diamond. Dummy's King and East's Knave both fell, and South false-carded with the 7. The Declarer knew the distribution of the suit, but was well aware that West could not know it on the bidding and must construe East's drop of the Knave as an encouragement card in that suit. Therefore, in order to give West an opportunity to err, he led a low club from the Dummy. East could not be expected to go up with the King, so he played low, and South's Knave was won by West's Ace. Hoping to establish the suit, West returned the diamond deuce, having placed partner's holding as three or four, including probably the Queen-Knave-Ten. To West's consternation and amazement, the Declarer won the trick with the trey, and now played three more hearts and four more diamonds, completing his contract of three no-trump.

The bid was foolish and should no doubt have been penalized, but the unusual situation created by the unsound bid and the fall of the singleton honors from the Dummy and East created an illusion which permitted South to make his contract.

TODAY'S QUESTION

With neither side vulnerable and no score, East, Dealer, bids one spade. What should South bid, holding the following hand?

♠—♡ A K J 10 2 ◇ K Q 10 8 7 ♣ K Q 9

Answer: Two spades—an Overcall of the opponents' bid suit. Game is practically assured if partner makes either a heart or diamond response, and may still be made after a club or notrump response.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

A shining delight is a touch of gleaming sequins. A frock of white crepe marocain has a center panel and detachable capelet of black paillettes, while all sorts of sequined jackets are now on display.

Just a little veiling is always effective. A delightful new evening frock of mahogany crepe has one side of the decolletage veiled by a one-sided capelet bordered in matching brown coq feathers worked in leaf shape.

A set custom is the idea of matching shoe and handbag, popular for both day and evening fashions. Such an evening set comes in black velvet with pipings and inlays of black satin. The bag fastens with an elaborately carved crystal set in silver and marcasite.

Keep warm by wearing fur sleeves. A new frock of grass green woolen has sleeves and belt of white galyak. The skirt has a gored front.

Keep your change in a new place. A very smart bag, just landed from Vienna, is in beige leather with a covered frame. There is a large top handle, also of leather, which has a metal slide fastener along the center. This opens to reveal divisions for notes and coins.

There's dignity in the enormous Elizabethan collar that Paris and smart New York likes so much just now. An exquisite wrap of egg-plant colored Lyons velvet has a low waistline, and blouses about the hips. There is an enormous ruff-collar of velvet finished by a huge, stiffened bow.

Chesterfields are Milder—

Chesterfields Taste Better

As smokers become more experienced, they demand milder cigarettes. Chesterfields are milder. Their mildness is just as much a feature as the beauty of their package.

The tobaccos are mild to begin with. Patient ageing and curing make them milder still. And Chesterfields contain just the right amount of Turkish—not too much—carefully blended and cross-blended with ripe, sweet Domestic tobaccos.

Chesterfields are milder. They taste better. That's why "They Satisfy."

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

Grantland Reaches Whitney Hall to Aid in Search

Dickey's wish that Hugh should arrive at Whitney Hall ahead of the Brixtons came true in less than an hour after he made it. So noiseless was Hugh's motor—he always drives a car deserving the superlative degree in adjectives—that we had no hint of his coming until the watchman came to tell us of his arrival at the side entrance leading to the private apartments of Dr. Barnes and his wife, where the watchman had directed him. We called Lillian and Harry at once, so that Hugh faced us all when Dr. Barnes brought him in.

"Tell me how things stand," he said first, and Dr. Barnes related the story of the kidnaping of Marion and Carolyn, down to the last detail of the note which had been wrapped around a stone and flung through the glass. Hugh sat silent for a few seconds and then spoke quietly:

"So we won't know what they want until tomorrow some time. But"—with a look around—"where are the Brixtons? They have been notified, of course?"

"They will be here within the hour, I think," Dr. Barnes said.

"Then," Hugh responded, "I will tell you quickly what I have discovered, and then get away from here. If it turns out that Owen is concerned in this, the Brixtons must not guess that I am having any hand in the investigation; but both Lee Chow and I will be on the job, and we can arrange to communicate with each other, I am sure."

"We shall be at the Sacketts-ville Inn," Dicky said promptly. "A note to either of us there will bring us at once to any place you name."

OWEN SICK

"Thank you. I shall hope, if I do send for you, to have some information worth your while. At present I confess I am at sea. If Owen is concerned in this thing, it is as an instigator. He did not spirit the girls away himself."

"How do you know?"

"Because he is ill in his room at the hotel," Hugh responded. "I am not ashamed to say I bribed some of the bell boys and maids, and they have kept me informed of his condition.

"But I am not depending finally upon that information. Lee Chow is at work now upon a plan which will give him absolute knowledge of Owen's whereabouts, and he will communicate with me near here as soon as he finds out anything one way or the other."

"But it is impossible," Lillian argued, "that Owen himself could have been the one who took the girls away. They would not have gone with him. You know," turning to Mrs. Barnes, "we told you that his name was no longer on the list of callers approved by us."

Mrs. Barnes nodded. "He would not have stepped inside the door," she said:

"However," Harry went on, "they might very well have climbed in a car of Owen's if he told them some story about our sending for them."

"But," Lillian objected, "he never would have let them know he was in reality——"

HUGH LEAVES

She stopped, and her husband finished the sentence.

"He wouldn't need to. He could get the car away from the main road for some reason, and there men he had hired could pretend to take the girls away from him."

"The message tomorrow ought to solve that question," Dicky commented.

"How?" The question came from all of us.

"If it's Owen, there probably will be a demand made for Marion's box. If not, it will be a lump sum of money."

"And we won't know anything about them until then," Lillian said, her voice suddenly breaking.

Hugh Grantland arose abruptly.

"I must get out of here before the Brixtons arrive," he said. "How early can I send you word at the inn telling where I expect to be?"

"Any time before seven," Dicky said. "I shall be busy after that."

I looked at him sharply. What was he planning?

But I had little time for conjecture. Hugh Grantland had been gone less than 10 minutes when the door of a motor car slammed outside, and we heard Helena Brixton's voice moaning hoarsely:

"Oh, my baby! My darling Carolyn! Where is she?"

-:- Correct Manners -:-

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Using the Title, "Miss"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—When, if ever, is it correct for an unmarried woman to refer to herself as "Miss?" For instance, when telephoning for an appointment with the beauty shop, or dentist, should she say, "This is Mary Brown," or "This is Miss Brown?"

2—Is there any time when it is absolutely incorrect for her to refer to herself as "Mary Brown?"

3—My next question is in regard to receiving callers. Our front door opens directly into the living room, with no entrance hall in which to place a hat rack. When gentlemen call, I am always uncertain as to what should be done with their hats and overcoats. Can you tell me how they should be disposed of?

4—What is your opinion of this paper and the general appearance of my letter? V.

1—When an unmarried woman makes a telephone call of the kind that you mention . . . for an appointment of any kind . . . or when she is giving her name to a tradesman or to a maid who is answering the telephone, she would always say, "This is Miss Brown," or, if further identification is necessary, "This is Miss Mary Brown" . . . but always the Miss.

2—In any of the cases I have mentioned in the first answer, it would be essentially incorrect for her to refer to herself as "Mary Brown." Likewise if she were telephoning to a business office and was leaving her name with the operator . . . she would say "Will you tell her please, that Miss Brown telephoned?"

3—Unless you wish to take the trouble of having them go to any of the bedrooms to "rest" their hats and coats, the only other thing to do is to leave a chair, conveniently near the entrance, and indicate this chair as the place for the man to place his hat and coat. The important point is that the hostess shouldn't take the hat and coat from the man . . . she should indicate to him where he is to place it.

4—I could never be enthusiastic about a girl's using the long, one-sheet letter paper for her social correspondence. It looks business-y, and not a bit social. Your handwriting is good, although a bit too large, I think. If you make it smaller in scale, it will look more "de-developed." But it is gloriously legible! Your letter-form, too, is very good, except for too-much abbreviating (especially the name of the state and the name of the month).

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

'Parrot Fever' a Rare, but Dangerous Disease

You have read about the recent serious illness of Mrs. Borah. She suffered from a rare disease, known as "psittacosis."

Dr. Copeland

Until a few years ago psittacosis, or "parrot fever," was regarded as exclusively a disease of birds, but that it can also afflict mankind, is now an accepted fact.

Research has shown that the disease is caused by a germ which has been given the name "bacillus psittacosis." Carried by the diseased bird this germ is transmitted to man.

Like rabbit fever, it is rarely found in domestic animals, but only in birds that have recently been shipped from South America and other tropical countries.

Persons stricken with this disease complain of a chilly feeling, intense headache and fever. The tongue is dry and coated. The disease soon develops into a peculiar type of pneumonia, which in mild cases begins to clear after eight or 10 days. If no complications take place, recovery is complete within 15 or 20 days.

Psittacosis is a serious disease in persons over 50 years of age. It is particularly dangerous when it afflicts undernourished and weakened individuals. In the more severe form the lungs are more and more involved and fatal pneumonia may develop.

A convalescent serum has been used with some success. Intensive studies are now being made to develop a vaccine for the treatment and prevention of parrot fever.

In many instances the disease is baffling. It may be confused with a common cold, grippe or influenza. This is unfortunate because persons afflicted with psittacosis require immediate and intelligent care. Neglect is dangerous.

Fortunately, psittacosis is a disease that can be prevented by rigid quarantine rules. The officials of all countries provide special methods of inspection of all birds in shipment. The birds must undergo careful health inspection before they are allowed to be sold in this country, and those which show signs of illness, such as loss of appetite, roughing of feathers, cough or diarrhea are barred.

When you purchase a parrot, a "love bird," a parrakeet or a canary, make sure it is in good health. This is particularly important if the bird is not of domestic breed, but has been imported from a tropical climate.

In what I have said, I do not mean to imply that parrots or other birds are dangerous pets. They are a menace to health only when diseased. The bird you have had a long time is perfectly safe, of course.

Answers to Health Queries

Mrs. W. B. Q.—What can be done for phlegm dropping in the throat?

A.—This is probably due to nasal catarrh. Send self-addressed stamped envelope for full particulars and repeat your question.

* * *

B. J. D. Q.—What is the correct weight for a girl aged 21, 5 feet 3¾ inches tall?

A.—She should weigh about 122 pounds. This is the average weight for one of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

* * *

Mrs. H. R. R. Q.—How can I reduce?

A.—Eat very sparingly of starches and sugars. Reduce the amount of food taken at each meal. For further particulars send self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

R. F. C. May Finance Flood Relief Plan

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 21.—Diversion of the Tygarts Valley River at Elkins for flood protection is under consideration, the project to be financed by Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds.

It is proposed to dig a canal from a bend in the river near the state Odd Fellows' Home across a strip of land below here. This would divert waters of the river during flood stages.

To be rid of a Cold

ABORT

(with lemon juice)

Often a cold that you thought all gone—comes back! That's because the remedy used does not drive the cold symptoms from the system. Try cold abortion and you'll find those stubborn colds broken-up and gone within a few hours. To abort a cold, squeeze two full-sized lemons in a glass of very hot water, to be taken preferably at bedtime. Two hours before, start taking a tablet of Pape's cold compound each hour. After the third tablet take the lemon juice and hot water without sugar, and go to bed, well-covered. Sound sleep will follow, and the cold will be aborted by morning. The lemon juice treatment never fails, but you must have the cold compound to clear the head, dry the nasal passages, and allay any fever. Any druggist has Pape's cold compound; it is perfectly safe, and a tablet will check a cold at any time.

YOUNG GIVES TALK HERE

Bicknell Young, C. B. S., of Chicago, in delivering a lecture on Christian Science, sponsored by the Second Church of Christ, Scientist, at Islam Grotto, yesterday, spoke of the start of the church.

While speaking of difficulties Mary Baker Eddy had to meet, he said:

"Mary Baker Eddy discovered this science. For years she had to stand alone, and she had to present and prove to mankind the value of the original and revolutionary ideas concerning God, man, the universe, and the healing Christ."

Later he stated that the religion had nothing to do with the mystic. He said:

"It is well to state that Christian Science has nothing in common with thought transference or telepathy or mental suggestion or any other method usually called mental."

Young is a member of the board of lectureship of the Mother Church, First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Mass.

Wife Held Easier To Acquire 30 Years Ago

COLUMBUS, O.—(INS.)—It was easier to find a wife in 1900.

So declared Dr. William J. Cooper, United States commissioner of education, in an address here at the twenty-seventh annual convention of the Ohio congress of parents and teachers. Dr. Cooper said:

"The chances are that the type of intelligent woman who would marry an intelligent man in 1900 would have chosen to remain single in 1920."

FARM INCOMES SHOW BIG DROP

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The American farmers' gross income for this year is tentatively estimated by the Agriculture Department at $5,240,000,000—less than half of the 1929 returns.

Farm production in 1931 brought $6,955,000,000; $9,403,000,000 in 1930 and $11,950,000,000 in 1929.

Estimates of expenditures and net incomes for this year have not been made, but the department says that "expenditures have probably been further reduced since farms have sharply curtailed expenditures, especially for fertilizer, machinery and repairs. However, it appears unlikely that these reductions have amounted to as much as the reduction in gross income."

The reduction in gross returns since 1929 is ascribed "largely to national and world-wide changes in financial and economic conditions which have brought about lower price levels in general, and have curtailed demand for farm products in both domestic and foreign markets."

PHANTOM VOTE MARKINGS BARED

Phantom markings for Republican legislative candidates were found on 57 straight Democratic ballots when the recount board began its work on approximately 418 ballots in the First District of Rankin.

Judge W. H. McNaugher noted on the record:

"All these (57) ballots are valid and the so-called phantom marks will raise the question whether there is such prima facie evidence of fraud as to require the recount board to take cognizance of it in its computation of the vote cast."

A decision will be made by the court later.

Attorney B. B. McGinnis, for the Democratic party, called the court's attention to the fact that 15 voters were registered by the First District election board on election day and no affivadits of this registration have been found.

Charges of fraud have been made in the Tenth Legislative District, where there is a close contest for the four Assembly seats.

Twenty-nine electors in the Fourth District, Ninth Ward, voted for both President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt, and lost their vote. The returning board judges on a recount, held these ballots valid in regards to other candidates.

Tabulation of the vote in 16 districts of the Thirtieth Congressional District today put Edmund F. Erk, Republican, in the lead over Twing Brooks, Democrat. Erk, in 89 of the 185 districts, had 18,484 to 17,470 for Brooks.

The 16 districts canvassed today showed a gain of 22 votes for Erk over the unofficial vote recorded on the night of election. Brooks still maintains an unofficial lead of 252 in the entire district.

Jacob W. Shenkel, Democrat, won a seat in the Legislature, the returning board announced, as it completed the tabulation of the vote in the Sixth Legislative District. The vote was: Patrick Cawley (Rep.), 14,312; W. A. Renne (Rep.), 13,538; T. J. Gallagher (Rep.-Dem.), 28,995; J. J. Kane, 17,652; Shenkel, 15,465.

LINKS GERMANS IN WAR BLASTS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—A chain of evidence was cast by the United States today around a secret message, written in invisible ink, to link spies of the imperial German government with the destruction of the Black Tom Terminal and the Kingsland (N. J.) munitions plant.

The German-American Mixed Claims Commission, sitting in its last case, heard Robert W. Bonynge, American agent, advance evidence that the secret message supported his charge that German agents had destroyed the plant.

The message was sent by Frederick L. Herrmann, a German agent in Mexico City, to Paul Hilken, an agent in the United States, in April, 1917.

Extensive testimony was introduced by Bonynge in an effort to prove that the message was written on the pages of a magazine.

Funeral Rites Held For Game Warden

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 21.—State game protectors from Western Pennsylvania today paid homage to Joseph Kennedy, game warden in charge of Washington County. Funeral services for Warden Kennedy, for 27 years an employe of the Pennsylvania Game Commission, were held at his home here this afternoon. Interment was in Monongahela.

It was the first time in this part of the state that Division G, of the Game Commission turned out in a body in full patrol duty uniform.

Heifetz Reveals Joke on Self By Harpo

Once upon a recent time Jascha Heifetz, violinist, was telling friends that, with his fiddle, he had been self-supporting since his seventh year. Whereupon one of the friends, Harpo Marx, retorted:

"I guess before that you were just a bum."

Heifetz told that story on himself today, when he arrived here for a concert.

He thinks schools of higher learning are paying too much attention to sports and not enough to music.

'KING' ADMITS CULT KILLING

DETROIT, Nov. 21.—The self-styled "king" of a weird religious cult that demanded a human sacrifice was held today upon his reported confession that he invited the first stranger he met into his home and killed him on an altar.

Police quoted Robert Harris, 44, Negro, as saying:

"The ninth hour of the twentieth day had come. It was predestined 1,500 years ago that at that hour I must make a human sacrifice to my gods. It must not be a member of the Order of Islam, but some stranger—the first person I met after leaving my home."

That person, the confession said, was James J. Smith, 40, Negro. Harris told police of inviting Smith into his home, crushing his head with an automobile axle "just to quiet him," then stabbing him through the heart on the altar. When Smith's body was found on the crude altar the eight-inch sacrificial knife was thrust through the heart.

Harris said his cult had as members 100 Detroit Negroes.

3 STAGES OF A COLD

Far Easier Relieved in the First Than in the Second or Third Stage!

It has been discovered that a cold ordinarily passes through three stages. The first is the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours. The second is the Watery Secretion Stage, 1 to 3 days. The third, the Mucous Secretion Stage. A cold is far easier relieved in the first stage than in the later stages.

The wise thing is not to let the cold get into the second stage. Check it quickly. This you can do by taking Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. A few of these tablets taken immediately upon catching cold will usually expel the cold overnight and thus prevent the infection spreading within the system. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine routs a cold quickly because it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels—kills the cold germs, infection and fever in the system—relieves the headache and grippy feeling—tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

No worry about what you're taking when you take Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It is utterly safe. Contains no narcotics and produces no bad after-effects. Does not upset the stomach or make the head ring. Every drug store in America sells Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. It has been the standard cold tablet for years. Handy, pocket-size box, cellophane-wrapped. Remember, anything less than the treatment afforded by Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is taking chances. Get it today. Accept nothing else.

Patricia Pitt

From former Pittsburghers comes word today of their daughter's betrothal. The Joseph Rogers Paulls, now of Fifth avenue, New York, announce today the engagement of their daughter, Miss Josephine Paull, to Tenison Westenra Newsom, of Hartford, Conn.

The Paull family has been associated with Pittsburgh for ever so many years. The young bride-to-be is a great-great granddaughter of Col. James Paull, of the Revolutionary Army, who went from Virginia in 1768, and settled Western Pennsylvania.

She was graduated from St. Agatha School, New York, class of 1926, and from Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., class of 1927. Then she traveled and studied abroad a year.

Her fiance, the son of the John George Newsoms, of Clinton, Conn., and a grandson of Mrs. Lewis and the late Col. Westenra Lewis, of Ottowa, Canada, attended Trinity College, Hartford, class of 1922.

Among the many members of the younger set in New Haven, Conn., over the week-end for the Yale - Harvard game and all the social affairs for which the game is an excuse, was a group of Pittsburghers.

In East For Game

Margaret Yates was a guest at the Sachem Club; Jane Crannell, Margaret Hodge, Louise Metzger and Anne Wehr, at the Franklin; Mary Sutton at the Colony, and Dorothy Hedges at the Cloister, all Yale fraternities.

* * *

Of course you all recall Margaret Standart, of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., who has visited here often. She was a familiar figure at horse shows round about for several years, riding Rolling Rock entries in several events.

Standart Betrothal

Word comes from her mother, Mrs. E. Phillips Standart, of her engagement to Arthur Alexander Baldwin, son of the Arthur Douglas Baldwins, of Cleveland.

The bride-to-be is the granddaughter of the late Rev. and Mrs. Henry Lewis Mayers. For 28 years Dr. Mayers was pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Kittanning.

The Pittsburgh Symphony's opening concert of the season last night was a popular event, as one might expect. Among the music patrons noted at the concert were Mrs. William Maclay Hall with her daughters, Mrs. J. L. D. Painter and Mrs. William Larimer Jones, Jr.; Mrs. Francis A. Keating, Mrs. H Allen Machesney, the Edmund W. Mudges and the Leonard S. Mudges, Mrs. W. H. R. Hilliard, Mrs. T. A. Robinson, Mrs T. Clifton Jenkins and her daughters Elizabeth and Clara Dorothea.

Seen at Concert

Mrs. Herbert DuPuy, a faithful concert-goer, was there, as were Mrs. F. I. Merrick, the Alfred Polland Brills, Mrs. John W. Lawrence, the Samuel Harden Churches, the Reginald Quailes, Mrs. Hughart Laughlin, Mrs. George M. Laughlin III and the Pomeroy Bassets.

Mrs. Mortimer Miller, whom I see at all the concerts, patronized Pittsburgh's own symphony, and so did Mrs. Charles Dahlinger, the Arthur Littles, Miss Madelaine McClintock and Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby.

Brentwood Bride On Eastern Honeymoon

Miss Marguerite Hermann, daughter of Mrs. Eva Hermann, of Brentwood, became the bride of Gerald Fingal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Fingal, of Wilkinsburg, at 4:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. Officiating was the Rev. Robert Woods, pastor of the Homewood Lutheran Church.

The bride wore a gown of midnight blue transparent velvet with a yoke of lace and her flowers were orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Ruth Bradley, her maid of honor and only attendant, wore black chiffon velvet with pink roses. Richard Fingal was his brother's best man.

Following the wedding dinner Mr. and Mrs. Fingal left for the East and after today will be at home in Brentwood.

In the celebrated "Golden Horseshoe" will be representatives of New York's best-known families. The opening of the Metropolitan also, in a degree, sets fashion standards for the coming season. Stylists will be present to observe colors, trends, and novel ideas in the gowns worn by society's "great ladies."

New York's Junior League is sponsoring a series of six concerts, the first of which was given on Wednesday. They are to continue until February.

Auchincloss, becomes the bride of Benjamin C. Betner, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin C. Betner, of Radnor, Pa.

SHADES OF RED BRIGHTEN THE WINTER SEASON'S FASHION SCENE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—This is a red winter, as far as Paris fashions are concerned. Bright reds, scarlets and vermilions, grape and wine reds, Burgundies—these are the colors that repeat themselves everywhere on Paris streets and in French dressmaking salons.

* * *

IT IS surprising to see how quickly French women have taken to the color. With black reviving in importance, it was expected that bright color—in fact, color of any kind would gradually fall into discard, but red remains among current favorites. Even where costumes are black, navy blue or brown, red stays as an accessory color. Red hats and scarfs, red bags, and even red shoes are popular favorites these days.

* * *

* * *

THE DRESS itself, done by Vera Borea, is one of the new type two-piece models, which mark clearly the natural waistline. It has a little flaring peplum, which is longer at the back, and has a wide box plait at front and back to give plenty of fullness. The fabric is a light-weight tweed, in oxford gray.

* * *

Winter Colony Increases at Hot Springs

HOT SPRINGS, Va.—The continued growth of the Homestead colony and the arrival of scores of well-known persons for the Thanksgiving season marked an interesting week at Virginia Hot Springs.

New Yorkers arriving at the Homestead include Mrs. George Evans Turnure, Mrs. George A. Ellis, Sheppard Homans, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Appleton with Mrs. Herbert Coppell, Clement W. Booth, joining Mrs. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. Elon Huntington Hooker, Ferdinand Jelke, Jr., Miss Oma Pursley, H. Warren Hubbard, Capt. and Mrs. Frederick Russell and Henry Goddard Leach.

David Sinton Ingalls, unsuccessful candidate for the Governorship of Ohio, and Mrs. Ingalls arrived from Cleveland with Mr. and Mrs. Earle Johnson and were joined by Mr. Ingalls' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stimson Ingalls.

Other prominent arrivals included Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Mortimer, of Glen Ridge, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Brogan, of Jersey City; Mrs. E. E. Dickenson, of Essex, Conn., with Mrs. L. M. WELFARE DRIVE SPURRED IN FINAL WEEK

Workers Strive to Raise $1,000,000 Still Needed

The final week of the drive of the Welfare Fund dawned today with workers determined to raise the remaining $1,000,000 of the $2,500,000 goal.

Leaders said this amount could be raised only if the rate of daily contributions is increased 100 per cent. They did not believe the campaign would be extended in the event the required amount is not raised.

Families now dependent on the fund for relief total 42,000, according to Frederick P. Stephan, of the research bureau.

SCHOOL TUITION TRUCE REACHED

Chalfant Borough High School students today were attending Union High School in Turtle Creek, after Principal W. W. Lantz announced last night he had been officially instructed to allow the Chalfant students to enter the school, pending a definite agreement between the boroughs as to when the former can pay more than $17,700 in delinquent tuition.

Fearing the high school board's edict of "no pay, no school," might be put into effect today, the Chalfant Borough School Board previously had made arrangements to send their 54 high school students to East Pittsburgh, according to R. R. Schultz, president, should the original Union High edict stand.

Schultz explained his board could not sign an agreement to pay the back tuition because there is only about $4,000 in the board's treasury. He said, however, that state law made it compulsory for his board to pay, whether a written agreement was in effect or not.

He said the borough might be forced to close its primary schools if the board is forced to pay the back tuition in the near future.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

CORONA, Cal., Nov. 21.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

"Hello, Gov. Roosevelt; nice of you to come, knowing your distaste for Washington."

"Hello, Mr. President; nice of you to make it possible for me to get to Washington, but let's get right to business. Are these foreigners going to pay?"

Will Rogers

Mr. Hoover: "Not unless they have to."

Mr. Roosevelt: "What were your campaign promises?"

Mr. Hoover: "No postponements and no cancellations."

Mr. Roosevelt: "Mine, too. What do you say, just for a novelty, that both parties keep their campaign promises?"

Mr. Hoover: "That's O. K. with me. Stimson bring us a cable blank."

Dear (?) Europe: Your application of poverty to the U. S. government for extension on your notes is respectfully denied, as the taxpayers at home whom we borrowed the money from are demanding it. If we don't receive it from you we have no possible way of refunding it to them. We hope this is quite clear. Yours respectfully, Hoover and Roosevelt, representing U. S. government. Yours, WILL.

WOMAN RISKS LIFE IN FIRE FOR PAPERS

Sharpsburg Resident, 76, Delays Rescue To Save Valuables

While smoke filled her home at 1415 Main street, Sharpsburg, today, from a blazing dwelling adjoining, Mrs. Anna Grabb, 76, a widow, delayed her rescue until she went upstairs and procured valuable papers.

As William Bluemling, 20, of 1505 Main street, threw a blanket around her to aid her escape, police broke in the front door, and assisted in rescuing the aged woman.

The blaze, according to firemen, started in the home of George Eisengart, 1413 Main street, one of a row of frame two-story dwellings, and spread to houses on each side. An overheated stove in the Eisengart kitchen was blamed. Joseph Ferraro occupied the dwelling at 1411.

Street car traffic in Main street was tied up for nearly an hour. The damage was estimated at $5,000.

SEALS SENT OUT IN ADVANCE

Twenty-five million Christmas seals will reach residents of Allegheny County before the start of the annual seal sale of the Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh, which begins Friday. The sale, under the auspices of the league's committee, of which John F. Casey is chairman, will continue until Christmas. Simultaneously with the seal sale will run a program of radio addresses, calling attention to the necessity of a relentless campaign against tuberculosis.

Proceeds of an aviation show next Sunday at Rodgers' Field will be turned over to the League's Christmas seal fund. P. W. Chabot, of the Aero Club of Pittsburgh, is chairman in charge of the exhibition.

Governor Accepts Seal Sale Honor

HARRISBURG, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has accepted honorary chairmanship of the Christmas Seal sale of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society. Accepting the honor, he said:

"A fighting chance to overcome tuberculosis hangs in the balance. Progress in overcoming the disease is endangered by the depression."

GEORGE P. THOMAS CHECKING THE PUNCHING MACHINE—FIRST OF A $1,000,000 ORDER—BUILT IN HIS PLANT FOR RUSSIA

BUILD MACHINE FOR SOVIET

A 100-ton punching machine, the first of a $1,000,000 order given a Pittsburgh company by the Soviet government, will be on its way to Russia this week.

This machine, a multiple punching device with an automatic spacing table used for punching rivet holes in structural steel for buildings and bridges, will take its place in what it is said will eventually be the largest fabricating plant in the world.

Two engineers from the George P. Thomas Spacing Machine Company, Glenshaw, builders of the machine, will go to Russia to superintend the erection of the units as they arrive. The unit just completed is 50 feet long and more than 20 feet high and is capable of a pressure of 2,000,000 pounds per square inch.

Two more machines are to be built here. They will be the first machines of their kind in Russia.

WILD CARGO

By FRANK BUCK

With EDWARD ANTHONY

CHAPTER XXXIV.

The most terrific struggle that can take place between any two living creatures is a battle between two full-grown bull elephants.

The jungle has known many a combat of this kind, but few men have been privileged to witness them.

Sex is invariably the answer when one of these titanic encounters takes place. A pretender comes along to dispute the sovereignty of the leader of a herd.

The boss elephant of a herd is like a sultan traveling with his harem. He does all the breeding. The herd is made up mainly of females; the rest of the pack consists of young elephants that have not yet reached maturity. As soon as the young males become potential breeders they are driven out to seek their own herds or to become lone bachelors of the jungle. The leader brooks no competition. Out these young lads go to shift for themselves as soon as they reach the age of puberty.

In other words, in the elephant world the strongest do the breeding. Only those that can fight for their females and win them can participate in the business of reproducing the species—which is the main reason why the race of elephants has retained its virility. When a herd leader no longer can hold his own he is ousted by a younger and stronger elephant who takes over the defeated one's females and sets himself up as chief.

JOURNEY DELAYED

Some time ago I happened to be in Colombo, Ceylon, on business. My next stop was to be in the Berar district of Southern India. I planned to make headquarters at a small native village about 16 miles from the old abandoned British military post at Jalna, while engaged in assembling some tigers, leopards, sloth bears and antelope to fill some orders I had from zoos.

At the time Lal was in Calcutta looking after a collection of animals, birds and reptiles I had rounded up there. I wired him to turn these specimens over to Atool Achooli, well-known local animal trader, who could be depended upon to take good care of them. His further instructions were to meet me at the village above Jalna (where we had spent several days a year or so earlier). I would need his aid in landing the animals I sought.

I was about to leave Colombo when I saw an opportunity to pick up some bonnet monkeys, langurs and other small Ceylon specimens. This delayed me considerably and I arrived in Jalna several days behind schedule.

Going up to the hamlet where the boy awaited me, I found the gloomiest Lal I have ever known. It was depressing to look at him. His expression was funereal.

"What's the matter, Lal?" I asked. "Are you sick or sad or what?"

MISSED RARE THRILL

The boy opened up and told all, in the process giving me one of the finest figurative headaches I have ever had. For I realized before more than a small part of his story had been unfolded that the fates had conspired to make me miss one of the thrills of a life-time. I found myself cussing those Ceylon specimens—and I'll tell you why.

About the time I was due to arrive from Colombo, a bamboo-cutter had brought word into the village where Lal was waiting for me that about five miles off in the jungle two bull elephants were fighting it out for the leadership of a herd. A young intruder—full-grown and powerful—had come upon a pachyderm pack that were grazing in the district.

The herd leader, a virile veteran of the jungle who had probably bred that herd for 40 or 50 years, resented the intrusion of the young upstart.

With a snort and a bellow of rage, and tail straight up in the air in the characteristic manner of his species when attacking, the boss elephant charged the interloper and butted him.

BOY SEES STRUGGLE

And then the fight began . . .

What made Lal sick was his knowing that for years I had

Capital Doing Business During Alterations

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Washington is still doing business during alterations.

Place goes under new management in March.

Very little goodwill goes with the transfer.

And no fixtures.

The carrying charges on the mortgaged budget will soon be a billion silver wafers.

At the end of the fiscal year they may be two billion. Our only chance to balance the terrific numerals is to postpone the end of the fiscal year.

And they're ain't been a better suggestion than that since Alexander Hamilton.

Even as things are now the Republicans hate to let the old store go.

So would you with 120,000,000 customers.

Girl, 9, Says Youth Killed Brother, 11

GREENSBURG, Pa., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Nine-year-old Clara Baird, lone witness to the death of her brother, Russell, 11, today had accused Joseph Morrow, 19, of Scottdale, of firing the fatal shot.

State police said Morrow admitted the shooting. The youth also said he was also wanted for firing at a woman, but was not quite sure where the offense had occurred.

Clara said she, Russell and Morrow were romping in the home of her mother, Mrs. Alva Baird, near Scottdale. She added:

"Russell hit Joe. It was just in fun, but Joe picked up his gun and fired right at my brother. Then he ran."

The Baird lad died almost instantly, state police say, his left arm and side filled with shot.

State troopers arrested Morrow near his home a few hours after the shooting.

A formal charge of murder was to be filed against Morrow today, state police said. An inquest will be held tomorrow.

GANGSTER SLAIN DRAFTING EXPOSE OF CRIME'S '400'

BULLETS SEAL BOOK ON VICE CHIEFTAINS

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Francis Anthony Fabrizzo, 40, Brooklyn, ex-convict, turned amateur author to write a manuscript on "How Gangland Works." In one chapter, he mentioned the names of racketeers he believed only recently made his two brothers victims of brutal "sack murders."

Today police studied the unfinished manuscript carefully in hopes some names in it might prove to be those of Fabrizzo's own slayers.

The story Fabrizio had begun read:

"Society has its four hundred and the underworld, too, has its four hundred.

"I know who the underworld's four hundred are; what they are doing and what they intend to do. I intend to write a book exposing the whole system.

"Some time ago a prominent brewer said the brewers were getting up a fund of $5,000,000 so they could control the breweries. But do you know that the underworld has raised a fund of $27,000,000 to keep control?

"I know certain things — —"

Three men posing as detectives went to his home last night as Fabrizzo was at dinner with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Fabrizzo; his sister, Mary, 28; a brother, John, and several other relatives.

He put on his coat and went with them. A few seconds later, the family heard shots fired in the hallway.

The elder Fabrizzo rushed out. His son lay dead on the floor.

3 ABSOLVED BY DETECTIVES

Joe O'Leary, of 932 Roxana street, had a welfare order for groceries in a nearby store, he explained in Central Police Court today, when he and two others, arrested in North Highland avenue near the place where a supposed payroll robbert attempt was to have been made Saturday, were arraigned.

O'Leary and two relatives, Andy Oslack and John Blofchaf, the latter two of Ardina, Pa., were virtually absolved by detectives.

They were ordered held until tomorrow by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg, until Roy Huntsman, general contractor, can appear. He received an anonymous letter his paymaster was to be robbed Saturday, but nothing happened.

Pittsburgh Symphony Society

SYRIA MOSQUE

Program:

Overture, "Leonore" No. 3.....Beethoven
Symphony No. 2 B Minor.....Borodin
Mon Coeur S'Ouvre a ta Voix.....Saint-Saens
Habanera, Seguidilla, from Carmen.....Bizet
Three Dances from the Ballet, "The Three-Cornered Hat".....DeFalla

The Pittsburgh Symphony Society made an auspicious opening for its season last night in Syria Mosque and gave one of its happiest concerts. There was a very large audience. If it came to defy the Blue Laws or to pay honor to good music—well, either would be a good omen.

Mr. Lissfelt

The program was exceedingly well chosen and timed and Antonio Modarelli demonstrated what strides he has made in conducting, for both in rhythms and tone came a greater flexibility than ever before. The Borodin Symphony is heavily scored in bass, has a tendency to the lugubrious in spite of lively themes, and through no fault of the orchestra did it sound bottom heavy.

The "Leonore" Overture was the best piece, however, and only in the presto was I aware of dominating accompaniment. The brilliant string ensemble was skillfully accomplished, and here the woodwinds gave good account of themselves. DeFalla's dances made a gay climax to the evening.

Coe Glade, contralto of the Chicago Opera, was soloist of the occasion, a beautiful and talented singer. Her voice is a true contralto, with rich and seductive tone. The air from "Samson and Dalila" moved somewhat slowly and was slightly marred by a vibrato in her sustained tone, but her fine scale and lighter voice were irresistible in both songs of "Carmen." As an actress she has imagination and uses it to good advantage but with artistic restraint on the concert platform. As encore she gave a most colorful reading of Moussorgsky's "Hopak."

STUDENT SLAIN BY HUNTER

CLEVELAND, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The body of Herbert Ulrichson, 18-year-old high school student who, police believed, had been shot by an early morning hunter, was found on a vacant lot on the West Side today.

Police said two companions of the youth reported that a hunter discharged a shotgun at them, apparently in the mistaken belief they were prowling about the neighborhood.

A search for the hunter, who evidently did not know he had hit anyone, was started.

War Message Makes 'Nice, Easy' New Cipher

Solution to No. 12, Which Puzzled Many, Given

Well, the Cipher Editor today prints a nice easy cipher for you fans—easy because it's long.

It's a war telegram and you might think, in figuring out the puzzle, what words are likely to be used in such a message.

As for Cipher No. 12, it stumped a lot of you. It's a perfectly simple reversed alphabet—such a cipher as many of you fans have been sending the Cipher Editor and asking to have run in the Sun-Telegraph.

Now, as for some of these codes you fans have been sending in—are you trying to stump the Cipher Editor? Some of them will undoubtedly be printed, others have some mistakes and can't be used. Cipherites should be sure to send a solution with original ciphers because the Cipher Editor receives so many he can't possibly take time to decipher them.

BOY SEND CIPHERS

Joe Adron, of 320 Gross street, sends two ciphers in two letters the same day and says:

"Why don't you think of the children and put a cipher in for them once in a while. I am a boy 11 years old and like to try to work your ciphers, but so far I have been unsuccessful."

Some of these ciphers ought to be easy for a bright lad like you, Joe. Try again until you get the hang of it.

Henrietta Bradwell, of Wilcox street, Carnegie, deciphers No. 9 and sends an original cipher that's just a mite faulty which she used in school years ago. Her message is nice and reads:

"No smile yet has ever cracked a face or detracted from the beauty of the person using it."

Another letter is from Milton G. Lehman, Jr., who says:

"I have been greatly interested in your daily ciphers."

He sends a cryptogram which lacks one letter of being perfect, but whose method is so good the Cipher Editor may correct it and use it.

CHALLENGE FOR EDITOR

Faithful correspondent and original cipher-sender is Frederick Wilson, of 510 Fifth street, N. E., Massillon, O., who challenges:

"You have been stumping fans, now let fans stump you."

Fourteen-year-old Samuel Williams, Jr., of 192 Center avenue, sends an interesting code without solution.

Frank Balowitz, of 125 Watkins avenue, Wilmerding, whose musical code the Cipher Editor didn't think would be fair to you cipher fans—or to your Cipher Editor—writes in sending another cipher:

"I solved cipher No. 10 in 20 minutes. It was not very, very easy to me, but just plain easy."

The Cipher Editor will have to see about using the code, one of these days, maybe.

Homer Chapel and James A. R. Rich boast that, together, they solved Cipher No. 11 in 15 minutes, and O. G. Rodgers, of Braddock road, Wilkinsburg, says only the Sunset and the Grant ciphers have yet stumped him.

Lots of other fine letters to the Cipher Editor are fully appreciated, but there are too many to answer each individually or to use all names in the story.

WOMEN BEATEN WITH HAMMER, MAN HUNTED

Police today were searching for Joseph Cohen, of 7828 Kelly street, in connection with the beating of his wife and her sister, Mrs. Fannie Pecor, in the latter's home, 3002½ Camp street, with a hammer, yesterday.

Police said they were told that Cohen beat his wife and her sister because they were late returning from an afternoon walk. He escaped from the Pecor home, where he and his wife were visiting, before police arrived.

The women, both unconscious, were taken to Mercy Hospital suffering from head injuries. Neighbors summoned police, they said, when they heard screams from within the house.

They had left the Pecor home for a walk. During their absence, police were told, Cohen was looking for them, apparently vexed because they had not returned. He is believed to have obtained the hammer in the cellar. The screams were heard shortly after the sisters returned.

SEEK BASKETS FOR 1,000

With Thanksgiving only four days away, Father Cox is making a desperate effort to fill 1,000 special holiday baskets for the families that come under his care.

He acknowledges that the outlook for success along these lines isn't as rosy as it usually has been in other pre-Thanksgiving periods. It really isn't the fault of the public because actual cash seems to be more scarce this year than ever. But he is going to keep working right up to Thanksgiving Day and has not given up hope of filling the quota he has set.

He knows that he has undertaken a big task on top of all his other welfare activities. But he is considerably cheered by the responses he has received from his appeal to farmers, truck gardeners, poultry raisers and house wives for some of their surplus to be distributed in these Thanksgiving baskets.

Of course he would like to have 1,000 turkeys. If he can't get turkeys' he'll accept chickens or cuts of fresh meat and will welcome any donations along these lines, or cash donations for this special purpose, before Thanksgiving morning. If you want to make a donation of food or cash, telephone to Father Cox at Old St. Patrick's—Grant 4390—and he will arrange to send his relief truck to pick up your donation.

These are some of the reasons why the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph has inaugurated a subscription campaign for the benefit of the Father Cox Relief Fund. For every subscription for this newspaper which Father Cox and his workers obtain, or which is sent in on the blank on this page, brings to Father Cox a liberal cash commission for his welfare work. Father Cox says that the commission derived from each of these subscriptions is sufficient to fill three daily baskets.

INSULL RETURN PRESSED

ATHENS, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—(INS.)—Samuel Insull may eat his Christmas dinner in Chicago.

Following the arrival of Charles Bellows and Andrew Vlachos, Illinois state's attorneys, observers predicted that extradition proceedings for the indicted ex-utilities magnate would be speeded up, with the possibility he may leave Athens within two weeks.

Insull's attorneys, however, declare they will demand postponement of the proceedings until the former power magnate's lawyers have time to reach here from Chicago to combat the evidence to be offered by Bellows and Vlachos.

The Chicago attorneys held a long conference with Leland S. Morris, charge d'affaires at the American legation. Insull revealed that Bellows and Vlachos had asked for an interview with him. He said:

"I did not reply to the request."

Insull, however, said he might eventually receive Bellows and Vlachos.

WILD CARGO

By FRANK BUCK
With EDWARD ANTHONY

hoped to come upon such a scrap, by far the most epic of all jungle hostilities. Here, by good fortune, the stage was set, and I was late.

The day of my arrival Lal told me the story of that elephant fight once, twice, three times. Then he told it to me all over again. This was two days after the great duel of tusks was over and the thing was still fresh in his mind.

I had never known the boy to be so talkative. Nothing in the past—and we had been through some thrilling experiences together—had ever loosened his tongue to such an extent. He strained his English vocabulary to its limits, and, when he had taxed it until it could serve no longer, he sprinkled his narrative with picturesque phrases in his native tongue.

Lal had induced the bamboo-cutter to guide him to within a fair distance of the struggle. The boy, with his keen knowledge of animals, knew that he must approach from up-winds so that his scent would not be carried to the combatants. As he worked his way toward the scene of the fight it was easy for him to tell that the tussle had been going on for some time; for the brush had been trampled down and mashed into the ground over an area of several hundred square yards. Great branches of eight-inch bamboo had been snapped off like match sticks. Trees had been uprooted and pounded into the earth.

GETS GOOD VIEW

Lal, as soon as he caught sight of the combatants, looked around for an unobtrusive roost that would afford a good view of the struggle. He selected a tree on a rise in the ground. From this elevation he could see everything. Only if the pachyderm gladiators forsook their battleground and disappeared into the jungle would they be lost to view.

As Lal took up his perch in the tree the fighting elephants, forehead to forehead, were struggling for advantage. Neither had yet inflicted a serious injury on the other. Each was bleeding from superficial wounds, but both seemed to regard these as flea-bites.

This first look, Lal said, was unimpressive. The animals appeared to be stalling. Barra Sahib—the boy's name for the older animal—seemed to be perfectly confident of the outcome and almost seemed to be resting. (Barra Sahib means "the big boss," usually applied in India to the head of a firm or government). The interloper, whom he designated as Do, (meaning No. 2) apparently had not given the old herd leader much to worry about.

What amused Lal at the outset was that the females, scattered about in the nearby brush, grazing, seemed to take little or no interest in the fight. Complacently they lumbered about on the fringe of the battleground, munching the various greens—leaves of trees, shrubs of all kinds, bamboo and other jungle dainties—that they encountered as they moved back and forth.

FORMIDABLE WEAPONS

Only now and then did they look up to see what was going on. Either they were accustomed to the sight of their sovereign disposing of an impertinent pretender or they didn't care who won, confident that regardless of the outcome they would have a leader and their physical needs would be ministered to. After all, that and food was all that mattered in the life of an elephant.

After a few minutes of this stalling, Do backed away about 15 feet and made a charge at his older adversary, futilely trying to sideswipe him with his seven-foot tusks. Barra Sahib's tusks were perhaps a little longer, and heavier at the base, he being the older animal.

(Which is a good time to point out that the tusks of a full-grown elephant constitute the most terrible weapon the jungle knows. The layman has no idea of the potentialities of these weapons, for circus elephants are the pachyderms he is mainly familiar with and these are practically all females, with no tusks at all or very small ones. Occasionally one sees a bull elephant in the performing ring, but without exception it is an animal whose tusks have been sawed off.)

Barra Sahib easily evaded the attempted sideswipe. The result was a head-on collision that left the animals, forehead to forehead, as they were before.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Equity may be the actor's pal, and all that sort of mustache-wax, but Equity still enforces one of its silly rulings in these "prosperous" times . . . I mean, that unless a member is paid up, that member can't even rehearse with a show . . . The member must get the coin to pay up his dues, or else . . . Rob a store, stick up a bank, murder a miser, do anything, but get Equity its rotten old dues money, or starve! . . . I couldn't believe it, so I phoned Equity to check on it . . . Ashton Stevens, the Chicago American critic, is in town again, looking over the first nights. Stevens loves to wear dinner clothes and a top hat. When Percy Hammond said to him: "What are you doing?" Stevens replied: "I'm working." To which Percy niftied: "Oh, of course, I see you've got your overalls on."

A recently revised will made by a millionaire (who did much to make Broadway famous or infamous), and who has appeared in your column plenty (so I'm told, that is) has included you as one of the beneficiaries. . . Of course, you aren't to know his name, because he wants to show you after he's gone that he's one customer who could "take it" and give it. . . Oh, I know you're bored stiff, but you told me to tell you everything that goes on in the daytime, and that's part of the hooey. Carveth Wells, the British explorer, and Frank Bring 'Em Back Alive Buck probably will tear each other to shreds when they meet. . . Wells has been lecturing all over the country calling Buck's stuff various names, so you can imagine. . . A Littleton Fox, Jr., of Cambridge, Mass., hopes you will make it clear he isn't to be anybody's groom or whatever you said about a man by that name.

Wallace Cox, author of "The Cocktail Hour" poem, says if you dial Calogen—you get him! . . . You can get Marshall Field & Co. by dialing Calmeup . . . Steele Williams, Jr., wonders if you would say that Hoover recently starred in "The Bird of a Nation?" . . . A Toledo reader, who read our items about millionaires installing electric lights and heat in their respective mausoleums, writes: "Why be antique? Out here in the sticks mausoleums are quipped with telephones!" Heheheh . . . Things I'd Like to Know . . . Could Joseph Vincent McKee, of Flatbush (he's a credit man) have claimed the mayorship of New York, in the event Joseph Vincent McKee, of the Bronx, was elected recently? . . . What could stop the Flatbusher from claiming it and getting it? . . . I thought I'd tell you, so that the next time the local papers ask readers to write in McKee's name, they identify the choice . . . I am very sorry if these notes today do not rate an orchid . . . I really feel third-rate, the most beastly cold, and getting this much of it prepared has made me sicker . . . But when I look back to the lead and see the Equity dues story, I feel that I have done my day's good deed. . . . Please decorate that actors' association with a wreath of garlic, and oblige me very much.

Bull Fighter To Make Movie

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 21. Surest way to get a job in the movies these days is to become a sport star. So it was with Johnny Weissmuller, Eleanor Holm and Buster Crabbe, and now Samuel Goldwyn plans to make a picture featuring Sidney Franklin, the Brooklyn bullfighter.

Through the marvel of plastic surgery, Franklin has emerged from the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital with a brand new profile, and is all ready to start his Thespian career. If present plans develop, he not only will act in the picture but will be its author, the story being taken from his autobiography to be published next year.

Sidney Franklin

Goldwyn got the idea of the new film after seeing Franklin's work in "The Kid From Spain." He found the Brooklyn matador a ready associate and has assigned a writer to adapt the autobiography for the screen.

One thing is sure, however. The picture will not be made in Hollywood. American laws against bullfighting gave too much trouble in "The Kid From Spain."

HOLLYWOOD PARADE

Lola Lane and Lew Ayres are separated for the first time since their marriage. She has gone to New York for a month's visit to her parents. Meanwhile, Lew is busy at Fox on "State Fair." They'll have Christmas dinner together in Hollywood . . . There will be a compromise ending on "Farewell to Arms." Frank Borzage and Helen Hayes went back to Paramount to shoot a new finish in which the death or recovery of the heroine will be left to the imagination of the audience . . . Friendly rivals, Cary Grant and Randolph Scott both had Virginia Cherrill to lunch. Diving champion Georgia Coleman was eating with Mel Shauer . . . and Ruth Chatterton, almost laden down with silver fox, was over to visit George Brent. She received a warm welcome from old associates at Paramount.

Virginia Cherrill

Janet Gaynor has turned autograph-seeker. She is getting signed pictures from all her friends . . . The hot spell (it's been a beautiful November out here) has caused Warner Baxter to reopen his Malibu house. Many other celebrities are following suit . . . Gene Markey says that Joan Bennett will be home for Thanksgiving . . . Many of the screen stars are improving the warm moonlight nights by taking that "trip to nowhere" on the S. S. La Playa. Evalyn Knapp and Don Cook were passengers the other evening, also Gene and Vina Delmar and Andy Devine and Aileen Carroll.

DOUG GLOBE TROTS

When Douglas Fairbanks returns to Hollywood, he will be able to give the film colony some first-hand information on the Island of Bali, which is the chief talk of returning South Sea travelers these days.

Next stop of the globe-trotting star will be Paris. Evidently, he intends to go on to St. Moritz from there, for Mary received a cable asking her to send on his skiing clothes. That Christmas rendezvous of the two is definitely out now, for Mary will be in the midst of her picture.

Short Notes Of Players

Miriam Hopkins will be featured in "Sanctuary," by William Faulkner.

Carole Lombard will play opposite George Raft in "Bodyguard," from a novel by Stanley Garvey, Los Angeles newspaperman.

Alison Skipworth and Roland Young are to be co-featured in "Good Company," an original story by Nina Wilcox Putnam.

Sari Maritza, George Brent, Richard Bennett and Irving Pichel have been cast in "Luxury Liner," which B. P. Schulberg is to produce.

Kent Taylor gets his first leading role in Zane Grey's "The Mysterious Rider," soon to go into production. Kent is a former extra.

Geo. Sharp to Manage Stock in Pitt

George Sharp, who successfully conducted a stock company in the Pitt for several seasons, has returned to Pittsburgh to assume the business management of the Edwin Vail Players in that theater. It is understood that the coming of Mr. Sharp will be followed by some change in the policy of the company, to be announced later.

Mouthful

Comic Joe E. Brown comes to the Stanley Thursday in his latest comedy, "You Said a Mouthful."

"Show Boat"

Helen Morgan, of the original cast of "Show Boat," will return to the Nixon in that Ziegfeld musical play next week.

Sheridan Will Show Fairbanks Film

Opening Wednesday in the Sheridan Square, Doug Fairbanks will be seen in his adventure piece, "Mr. Robinson Crusoe." Action begins when Doug bets some friends he can subsist for a month on a desert island. He gets along in great style until a band of natives break lose. Doug wins the bet, though.

-:- Plays and Players -:-

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The Nixon tonight will stage the first performance of its Thanksgiving week attraction, "The Cat and the Fiddle," operetta with Bettina Hall in the leading feminine role. There will be the customary matinees and an extra afternoon performance Thanksgiving Day.

Succeeding this production the Nixon will offer "Show Boat" next week, for which the seat sale will begin in the box office Thursday. This greatest of all the productions of the late Florenz Ziegfeld has just completed a long revival run in New York and it comes with a number of members of the original cast, including Helen Morgan and Norma Terris.

* * *

Blanche Ring, guest star of the Edwin Vail Players in the Pitt, will make her first appearance here in several years when she is seen tonight at the opening performance of "Cradle Snatchers," a comedy. There will be four matinees, including one Thanksgiving Day.

Next week the Pitt attraction will be "Whistling in the Dark," a comedy drama about an author who turns a compulsory association with crooks into a "best seller."

* * *

A Clarence has been selected to play the role of the Lion Man in a film, "King of the Jungle." Sokay, however, since the chap is Clarence (nicknamed Buster) Crabbe, an Olympic swim champ who learned about the water from those human fish, the Hawaiians of Honolulu, where his parents moved from California when he was two. Buster, as the movie billing will have it, is six-foot-one, all athletically developed and proportioned. He is a grad of the Univ. of Southern Calif.

* * *

The Detroit Civic Theater, founded by the late Jessie Bonstelle, has been renamed the Bonstelle Civic Theater in her memory . . . Billie Burke just now is appearing on a San Francisco stage, with Alan Mowbray, in Noel Coward's "The Marquise" . . . The musical version of "Cyrano," which recently opened in Boston, begins an engagement in Chicago this week, so New York will just have to wait a little longer . . . John Wexley, playwright who authored "The Last Mile" and "Steel," has been signed to write an original screen tale for M-G-M.

Gossip From Studios

Maureen O'Sullivan and Verree Teasdale brought their Scotties to the studios the other day, and spent the noon hour arguing over the superiority of their respective pooches.

Mary Carlisle and Dorothy Jordan, blonde and brunette ingenues, could both fulfill Cinderella's show requirements, wearing three slipper sizes.

Ethel Barrymore and Norma Shearer are the only feminine stars at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer who have kept their Christian names. Marion Davies, Greta Garbo and Helen Hayes changed their last names from Douras, Gustafasson and Brown. Joan Crawford and Marie Dressler started out in life with the respective names of Lucille Le Seur and Leila Koeber.

Adrian predicts that the lowly safety pin is to become very smart for feminine adornment. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer designer says it will be used for cuff-links and collar-pins.

THE NEXT STEP IN TALKING PICTURES IS READY FOR YOU!
Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Startling Innovation

There has probably never been so keen a curiosity concerning the picturization of a stage success as exists in the case of "Strange Interlude." When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was chosen to bring this important American drama to the screen, many people wondered how it would be possible to repeat in motion pictures the fascinating method of narration which made this great romance so popular during its long engagement at the Guild Theatre. The picture reveals what has been done. It marks a new era in talkies.

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

BY MARK HELLINGER

Explanation

THERE ARE TWO types of gentlemen in this world that I enjoy meeting. One is the fellow who says that, no matter how much he drinks, he can never get drunk. The other is the bird who will smile contentedly and tell you that he understands women. Both types are easily analyzed. The first is inexperienced. The second is a consummate liar.

Blinky belonged to the second class. A member of the underworld in good standing, what he stole and how he cheated need not concern us here. Sufficient to relate that he always had plenty of money.

As far back as Blinky's friends could remember, he had been quite a devil with the ladies. He was seldom seen with the same woman twice. That was against his code.

"What's the use of chasing around with one skirt?" he would argue. "What does it get you? Marriage. Yes, sir—marriage and babies. And then where are you?

"That kind of stuff is not for Blinky. No guy has to fall in love unless he wants to. And I don't want to. What's more, I ain't going to. If I watch my step, I'll be okay. Because I understand women."

That last crack, explained Blinky thoroughly, I don't have to tell you much about him. He understood women . . .

In due time, Blinky met Dorothy. Dorothy had been in several comedies on Broadway and knew every onion in the bag. Blinky took her out one night and gave her a few of the lines that always caused the ladies to fall for him. Dorothy failed to fall. She laughed at him.

So Blinky took her out a second time. And a third, and a fifth, and a tenth. Still, whenever he made advances, she gave him nothing but a good-natured grin.

"I'll tell you how it is, Blinky," she said. "I like you, but I'm not in love with you by several million miles.

"If you want to be a friend of mine, that's fine. But don't get any false notions. Because I don't feel that way about you. And that's all there is to it, my friend."

Meanwhile Blinky's friends were having the time of their lives with him.

"Thought you were the fellow who understands women," they laughed. "What's the matter with Dorothy?

"And what's that you said about never falling in love? Ho, ho! If you aren't in love now, you'll do until a guy in love comes along."

Blinky shrugged his shoulders.

"Well, what of it?" he replied. "Suppose I have gone a little goofy about Dot? Can't it happen to a fellow without you guys poking your noses into his business?

"But all this don't make no difference. Let me tell you something, smart guys. I'm going to get that dame—and I'm going to get her right.

"Remember what I'm telling you, boys. Dorothy is as good as mine right now. Because I understand women."...

Before another two weeks had passed, Blinky had asked Dorothy to become his wife. For the first time in his life he had fallen completely in love with a woman. He knew the mob would go into hysterics if he were hauled into the marriage net. But he had passed the stage when he worried about that. All he wanted was this girl.

Dorothy turned him down.

"That's the first proposal I've had in a long time," she said. "But what I told you before, Blinky, still goes. I don't love you enough. And I've got to say no."

When he reached his home that night Blinky was desperate. He sat in a chair, opened a bottle of brandy and began to think. When dawn came he was cock-eyed. But he was still thinking. . . .

Two days later, Blinky came to Dorothy's apartment. He was shivering. He looked beaten. He was a different Blinky. He flung himself at the girl's feet.

"Sweetheart," he cried, "you're the only one I can turn to. They're after me—but I can't leave town because of you. I've just killed a man. And it's only a question of time until the coppers nab me.

"I didn't know what I was doing, Dot. I lost my head. I wanted a lot of money to buy you things because I love you. And I croaked a guy. I won't go away, honey, because I love you. Darling, what am I going to do?"

Dorothy was the average woman. A bit shrewder, perhaps, but still the average woman. She looked at this man in torment—and then she drew him to her.

"Don't worry, Blinky," she murmured. "I'll help you. Forget it if you can. I'll help you. The cops will never nail you. Because you're going to stay right here—with me."

It's a good thing Dorothy couldn't see Blinky's face as she held him close. Because he was grinning . . .

About seven months drifted by. Blinky was the same man. A trifle more conceited, as his pals noticed when he slipped off to see them. But otherwise the same Blinky. It was Dorothy who had changed.

She had grown thinner. She was extremely nervous. She jumped at the slightest noise. And one night she told Blinky the reason.

"It's all because of you," she said. "I'm always afraid that the cops will nab you—and it's the terrible uncertainty of the thing that's driving me crazy. If only something would happen. If I only knew definitely that you would be caught—or that you'd never be caught. Then I'd be satisfied."

Blinky thought it over. He still loved Dorothy with all his heart. More, if possible, than he had loved her before. He knew now that she loved him, too. And he decided not to let her suffer any longer.

The following afternoon, he sat himself on the arm of her chair.

"Honey," he cried, "I've made up my mind to make you feel better. I'm going to tell you something.

"When I told you about killing a man, I was lying. I didn't kill anybody at all. But I wanted you terribly. And knowing all about women, I knew that you would be sorry for me. I told you that story. And I was right."

Dorothy's move was a great surprise to Blinky. She stood up, her eyes ablaze.

"You dirty two-timing rat!" she screamed. "So you lied to me, did you? And you've made me worry for seven months, have you? Get out of here, you bum. Get out and stay out!"

Blinky tried to argue. Dorothy began to throw things. Blinky ran . . .

To his pals, Blinky has been attempting to explain ever since.

"All I wanted to do," he asserts, "was to make her feel better. I did—and look what happened. I understand women all right. But she's different." . . .

The first "snow" of the season fell in Hollywood yesterday, but only upon Ann Harding, Leslie Howard, William Gargan, Neil Hamilton and other members of the cast in RKO Radio Pictures' version of Phillip Barry's play, "The Animal Kingdom." Property men shoveled it from the rafters of the studio's largest sound stage for one of the film's most dramatic sequences.

DODGE REPORTS BUILDING LOWER

Contracts awarded for new construction in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains during the period from November 1 through November 15, 1932, totaled $50,990,300, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. During the corresponding period of October, 1932, a contract volume of $54,339,300 was reported.

The October contract total for construction in the 37 Eastern states aggregated $107,473,900 and contrasted with $127,526,700 for September and $242,094,200 for October, 1931. Declines from September, 1932, were sustained in each of the four major structural classifications, except public utilities. Residential building showed a contraction from the September contract total amounting to about 4 per cent; non-residential building suffered a decline of about 25 per cent; public works declined about 22 per cent; and the value of public utilities contracts was almost double that reported for September. Each of the major types reported large declines from October, 1931.

HOME BUILDING

For the elapsed 10 months of 1932 total construction contracts aggregated $1,164,837,100 as contrasted with $2,804,802,000 for the corresponding period of 1931. Relatively, residential building and public utilities suffered more than did either non-residential building or public works. The residential total for the year to date, amounting to $247,865,100 compares with $729,934,800 for the corresponding 10 months of 1931. Non-residential contracts during the elapsed period of the current year aggregated $424,199,900 in contrast with $1,002,261,800 for the same period a year ago. Public works contracts during the first 10 months of 1932 totaled $427,737,600 as against $797,140,600 for the corresponding period of 1931; and contracts for public utilities showed a total of $65,034,500 as compared with $275,464,800 for the corresponding 10 months of 1931.

Of the 13 districts only three—Middle Atlantic, Kansas City and Texas—showed contract totals for October larger than were reported for their respective areas during September. Two districts—St. Louis and Kansas City—showed October awards larger than those reported for October, 1931; all other territories reported large losses from a year ago, except Texas where the decline was held within relatively narrow limits.

PITTSBURGH GAINS

Of the 13 major areas five—Upstate New York, Middle Atlantic, Chicago, Kansas City and Texas showed larger residential contracts in October than in September, and two additional areas—the Southeast and New Orleans territories—showed October residential awards at practically the September levels. All districts, however, showed lower residential contracts in October than were reported for October of last year.

For non-residential building October awards showed gains over September totals in the Upstate New York, Middle Atlantic, Pittsburgh, and Central Northwest districts; all other territories showed losses.

Overalls Returned, Duty Week's Pay

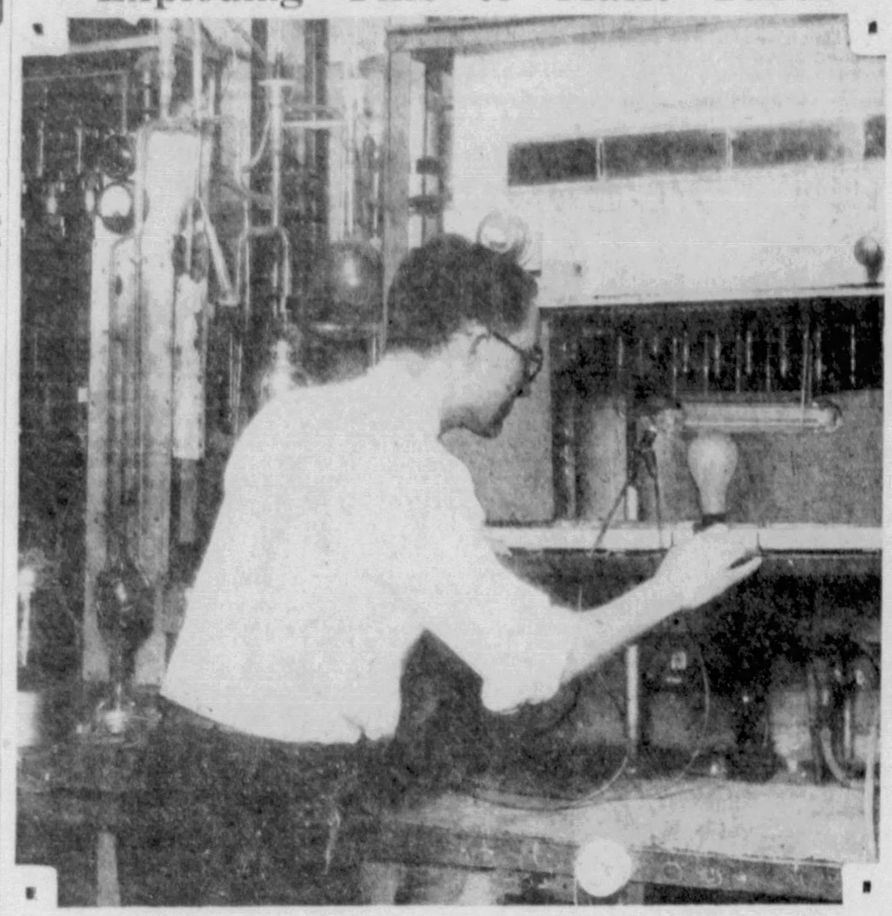
ELYRIA, O.—A pair of overalls which he had sent as a gift to a friend in Germany was recently returned to Jose Frassel, tailor here, because it require's a week's wages to pay the import duty on them.

Accompanying the returned overalls was a letter in which the German friend stated that the import duty amounted to eight marks and 60 pfennig, or $2.10 in American money, which amounted to a week's wages.

Cures Nerve Trouble In Suicide Failure

LONDON — Alexander Cohen cured himself of nerve trouble by attempting to commit suicide. His nerves had given way as a result of continued financial worry, and he threw himself before an electric train. The train passed completely over him only breaking his ankle, but the shock was so severe that it completely cured his nerves.

Exploding Pills to Make Tubes



DR. E. D. WILSON TESTING A PHOTO-ELECTRIC CELL THROUGH THE USE OF LIGHT

Dr. Wilson, research engineer, demonstrating at Westinghouse Electric the painstaking manufacture of the photo-electric tubes, now in use to perform many routine tasks in home, office and factory. One operation requires the explosion of tiny caesium pills within the tube to make it sensitive to light. When lighted, as here, the tube conducts current, therefore functions.

SCHOOL PLANS DANCE

The alumni association and the student council of Pittsburgh School of Accountancy have announced the details of the annual affair which draws together the active students and former classmates of the institution.

Between the hours of 9 and 1, on the evening of Friday, December 2, this group of young business people will enjoy themselves informally and renew old acquaintances, dancing to the tuneful productions of Carl Ludwig's Student Prince Orchestra.

Even the tickets, which are being sold by the class representatives and the school office, will be fun-provoking, because of door-prizes which will be distributed to 24 holders of lucky numbers during the evening.

Entertainment, souvenir programs, and refreshments will combine with the other features to make the grand ballroom of the Hotel Schenley a happy place.

LOANS SOUGHT BY CHURCH

Warning his hearers against bank withdrawals and hoarding, the Rev. James Lavelle, assistant pastor of St. Rosalia's Roman Catholic Church, Lydia street and Greenfield avenue, yesterday announced from the pulpit that the church would bank all money loaned it and pay the lenders 4 per cent interest, with permission to withdraw at any time.

Father Lavelle explained that the entire reserve fund of the church was tied up in a financial institution's reorganization.

In appealing for funds he urged all members of the congregation to attend the church's beneficial minstrel in St. Rosalia's Lyceum auditorium tonight and tomorrow night. Children attended a dress rehearsal of the minstrel yesterday. Numbers from Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" were sung by a cast and chorus of 60 in plantation costumes. The show is under the direction of Father Lavelle, assisted by William Murphy.

Peeved Nurse Routs Bandit with Hammer

NEW YORK.—(INS.)—A nurse never forgets. A holdup man hit Miss Elizabeth Corry on the head three months ago. The score is even now, for in a second robbery attempt she whacked the head of a bandit with a hammer before he could say "Hands up!"

POOR'S INDEX SHOWS RISE

Poor's Index of General Business is 63.9 for October according to the preliminary compilation in Poor's Business and Markets bulletin. This compares with 62.3 in September.

According to Poor's, the fall recovery has been more than seasonal. Among the industries that achieved more than a seasonal rise were steel and iron, coal and coke, and electric power. Mail order sales also showed a sharp increase. These favorable showings more than offset the decrease shown by automobile production, which sank to the abnormally low figure of 50,000 cars and trucks for the month.

Iron and steel production is at a very low ebb, but it must be remembered that the gain shown by this industry up to November 1 was made without any appreciable help from the construction, the automobile, or the railroad industries."

Otis Elevator Gets Supreme Court Job

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Thirty-seven elevators will provide for the transportation needs of the new United States Supreme Court Building in Washington, the cornerstone of which was laid recently. The contract for these installations, costing approximately $566,000, has been let to the Otis Elevator Company.

DOLLAR BASIS LIKELY FOR WALGREEN

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—When Walgreen Company (chain drug stores) directors meet to take action on an initial dividend on the common stock they are expected to set the rate at $1 annually, with the first quarterly disbursement of 25 cents a share probably payable February 1. Preferred dividends are payable quarterly beginning January 1 of each year.

Action on the common dividend will be taken directly or shortly after the annual stockholders' meeting on December 14, C. R. Walgreen, president, indicated in his letter to shareholders accompanying the annual report for the fiscal year ended last September 30.

$1.74 NET FOR YEAR

Net earnings of $1,663,198 for the year ended September 30, 1932, were equal after Walgreen and subsidiary preferred dividends to $1.74 a share on the 773,859 common shares now outstanding. In the preceding fiscal year Walgreen net was $2,045,411 or $2.05 a share on 801,980 common shares. With the common paying $1 annually, the full year dividend requirements on this stock and preferred would total $1,085,000.

At the close of the last fiscal year Walgreen was in a strong position as regards merchandising ability and the status of its leaseholds.

POSITION STRONG

Financially the drug chain has maintained its relative strength of the past few years. As of September 30, 1932, current assets were $7,925,713, including cash of $1,397,240 and current liabilities were $2,334,944 including commercial paper totaling $200,000. A year previous current assets amounted to $8,131,633, cash to $1,205,681, current liabilities to $2,800,296 and commercial paper obligations to $500,000.

Walgreen's rental policy has been for moderately short-term leases and it principally favors percentage-of-gross arrangements for rentals. Avoidance of cumulative increases in annual rents for store rooms has also helped to preserve profits in the face of declining sales. Net sales for the fiscal year 1932 were $47,612,220, compared with $54,017,179 in the year ended September 30, 1931.

BUSINESS

Credit Men Find That Collections Are Improving

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

AMERICA IS GETTING out of debt. Accounts are being paid more promptly. Sales are increasing. This summarizes the findings of the National Association of Credit Men in the organization's November survey.

The survey is based on reports from correspondents in 109 major markets of the country.

The credit men in recent months have been finding a definite continuation of the sharp upward trend in national sales and collection conditions.

For the second consecutive month, five cities report conditions as "good" in both sales and collections.

This does not reflect the entire situation. A large number of cities are reporting conditions as "fair" instead of "slow" as in the past.

* * *

Proportion Shows Sharp Improvement

IN THE NOVEMBER survey 51 per cent of the cities reported that they were enjoying "fair" collections. This compares with only 41 per cent of the cities in this class in the October survey.

In sales volume, 56 per cent of the cities are reported in the "fair" classification while only 49 per cent reported their volume at this rate a month ago.

So far as current business is concerned, there appears to have been little change in activity during the past two weeks. Seasonal factors are exerting a retarding influence but the decline appears likely to be smaller than is usual at the end of the year. Evidence still is accumulating that improvement in October exceeded normal seasonal proportions and this provides a strong basis for the belief that the worst of the depression has been passed.

* * *

Conference Board Reports Expansion

THE CONFERENCE of statisticians in industry, conducted under the auspices of the National Industrial Conference Board, reports that slightly more than seasonal improvement in business conditions was registered in October with a tendency toward increased activity in the heavy industries. The monthly reports of this organization represent the written opinions of more than 10,000 industrial firms.

News of recent weeks focuses attention on the fact that industry is not allowing the depression to discourage progressive plans to develop new processes and to find new ways of appealing to consumers.

In the automobile field we find that the leading makers of low priced cars have prepared models with improved lines and further mechanical refinements.

Milk companies in several parts of the country are experimenting with new types of paper containers which eliminate the expensive problem of collecting and sterilizing bottles.

Furniture manufacturers, we discover, are launching a new attack on the tendency to make the old furniture do for a few more years. They are reviving the movement toward modernistic furniture but are avoiding the extreme and impractical features in the designs which were put on the market with little success a few years ago.

2 Potato Thieves Given Jail Terms

HAZEL PARK, Mich.—Two Detroiters found potatoes expensive here when they pleaded guilty to stealing three bushels from a farm at Twelve Mile and Campbell roads. Fines of $60 each were assessed by Clarence R. Horkey, justice of the peace. The men, who elected to take 60-day jail sentences instead, were Joseph Wilk, 5901 Joseph Campau avenue, and James Lomous, 2110 Trombley avenue

SATISFACTION SEEN FOR BOTH TEAMS

THERE WAS GROUND for a feeling of satisfaction on both sides at the conclusion of the hard-fought Pitt-Carnegie game. Though held to six points, the Panthers have reason to feel glad that they won at all and maintained a record that is still unmarred by defeat, with only one game to go. Though it was tough luck to miss a scoreless tie through a fumbled punt, the Tartans are in a position to look back on their efforts with no little pride. They put up a fight against heavy odds that was worthy of their traditional spirit, their showing far exceeded the expectations of their most ardent supporters and the possibilities suggested by the dope, and in a sense the outcome was a greater victory for Carnegie than it was for Pitt.

Harvey Rooker

Though a break decided the game, Pitt must be given credit for being able to take advantage of the proffered opportunity, as Harvey Rooker did (again it was a Panther sub that shone), in recovering Stuart Dueger's fumble on the three-yard line. It may be luck to have an opponent commit an error, but it takes more than luck to turn that error to account. Pitt had to be playing the better football to recover the ball and cash in on Carnegie's slip. The better team won, but all honor to the Skibos. They surprised everybody.

IN LOOKING OVER some old Pitt plays, the Panther coaching staff was reminded that Brown's triple wing-back formation, which has attracted so much attention in the East, was used by the Blue and Gold in 1927 and again in 1930. Pitt worked the system from an unbalanced line, but otherwise the formation was essentially the same.

The Panthers went into it from the double wing-back, with the quarterback shooting over to a place outside the wing-back, instead of staying in line with the fullback. He was thus in a position to take the opposing end from the side, instead of tearing into him from in front. Pitt did not use the formation often, and made no attempt to include it as part of the regular system, but at that it is not new to Western Pennsylvania.

A NOTRE DAME grad of 1931 has picked an "all" team of the mid-West from men whom he has seen in action. He says Berry, of Illinois, is too good to be omitted from the backfield, so he placed him at a half. Newman, of Michigan, is the quarterback selected.

McGuire, of Wisconsin, is the halfback chosen with Berry; fullback, Manders, of Minnesota; center, Oehler, of Purdue; guards, Savage, of Michigan, and Huggins, of Purdue; tackles, Krause and Kurth, of Notre Dame, and ends, Robinson, of Minnesota, and Manske, of Northwestern.

FOOTBALL SHORTS: In eight years Southern California has scored 2,563 points against 417 for the opposition. Though Notre Dame has won 12 out of 14 games against Army, the difference in the total score is only 25 points. George Trafton is 35 and has played with the Chicago Bears for 11 years. Emden McCranie, Georgia State freshman, this year played in the first game he ever saw, and he made the first tackle in the contest. A movie firm paid $9,000 to take pictures of the coming Notre Dame-Southern California clash and will show the entire game in film. Marty Brill, a rough, tough gridder a couple of years ago, is running a flower shop and handling dahlias in a Philadelphia suburb.

Fielding Yost

AFTER WATCHING A lot of moss-grown tricks used in football this year, Dan Daniel did some tracing and found that Fielding Yost brought out the statue of liberty stunt in 1906 at Michigan; that the fake quarrel and fake injury dodges were introduced by Foster Sanford at Cornell in 1896; that the "sleeping" end was Alonzo Stagg's idea in 1902, and that the shoestring gag dates even farther back.

It was Foster Sanford, too, who invented the huddle. He used it as a stratagem first against Princeton while coaching at Rutgers in 1914. "We huddled and then broke into an end run for seven yards," Sanford relates. "The Tigers were mystified, and Bill Langford, the referee, said we were using an illegal mass play and gave us a penalty. He spoiled my whole day."

AMONG THE BOYS who have overcome heavy physical handicaps to become football players might be mentioned Maurice Garb, of a New Orleans high school team, who is a regular lineman though he has but one arm. He is going to enter Tulane.

And Norwood High in Boston has a player named John Flaherty, who, though left stone deaf after a siege of pneumonia two years ago, has fought his way up from the scrubs to regular halfback. Through

JOE M'CARTHY will attend both the minor and major league baseball meetings next month, but is not hopeful that he will be able to do much more than stand around and fan. He would like to grab one of several players scattered among the seven rival American League clubs, but realizes other managers will fight shy of making any trades with the Yankees for fear that a swap might make the world champions even more powerful than they were last season. No rival pilot will offer McCarthy any player that might help him, and if Joe himself were to make trade overtures the other fellow probably would demand too much in exchange.

EVER SINCE HE started fighting as a professional in 1925, Pete Nebo, who gave Kid Chocolate a close battle recently, has been listed in the record books and elsewhere as a Seminole Indian. But according to Luis Guttierez, manager of Chocolate, this is all wrong.

"It is not true that Nebo is an Indian," Guttierez declares. "He is a real Cuban, and his proper name is Pedro Nebot. He speaks better Spanish than I do. My Kid and Pedro actually were fighting for the lightweight championship of Cuba when they met. That's why they fought so hard. Nebo is no part Seminole."

THAT MAX BAER has declined a match with Primo Carnera to be followed by a title fight with Jack Sharkey for the Madison Square Garden people in New York, and has hooked up instead for a bout with Max Schmeling in June, does not necessarily indicate a boycott on Sharkey, as has been charged. It's common business sense.

Baer no doubt realizes that Schmeling is the best drawing card in the heavyweight ranks, and that he will get much more out of 20 or 25 per cent for meeting the German than he would collect out of 10 per cent for facing Sharkey. And if he can eliminate Schmeling he will still have the Sharkey match in September. They couldn't keep it away from him. Baer is in a stronger position than any other figure in the triangle, and is playing it for all that it is worth.

Herbert Dienenthal

THEY'RE GOING IN for gymnastics in a big way at the East Liberty Y. M. C. A., and a great stride toward carrying out the plan successfully has been taken in the acquisition of one of the country's most competent instructors. Herbert Dienenthal, a graduate of Breslau University, who has a background of 14 years of Turnverein experience, has been engaged by the East Liberty branch to teach aspiring gymnasts, and indications point to large classes from the start. Dienenthal will be in charge at the "Y" on Monday and Thursday nights of each week at 7:30 o'clock. There will be no extra fee for this instruction.

By JULIUS LEVIN

With the elimination of Freedom High School as a contender for the class B football championship of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League as a result of its defeat at the hands of East Pittsburgh Saturday, it becomes more apparent as the season draws to a close that post-season games will be the medium by which the various titles in the organization will be distributed this year.

When the W. P. I. A. L. football committee gathers at the Fort Pitt Hotel Saturday morning to grant hearings to all schools claiming championship recognition, Chairman John G. Hulton and his collaborators will find the situation well in hand.

TWO SURVIVORS

The race for the class B championship is the first to be concluded with Glassport and Springdale the sole survivors of a hectic struggle to reach the scholastic throne in their division. Both teams have wound up their campaigns, meeting all requirements of the W. P. I. A. L. rules and it is almost a certainty that they will meet in a post-season fray for the crown.

Taking the point system as a basis for determining the title claims of Glassport and Springdale, one finds the teams virtually deadlocked. Glassport, showing a string of six victories over class B opponents, has a point total of 119 1-6, while Springdale, possessing a string of seven triumphs over class opponents, has a point total of 118 4-7. League rules require contenders to play six class B foes.

With the class B competition completed insofar as the regular season is concerned, the major portion of scholastic interest this week centers on the outcome of the races for the class AA and class A titles. Both will be up for settlement Thursday afternoon.

END SEASON THURSDAY

The class A championship rests between Ambridge and Beaver Falls, both hailing from the Beaver Valley. Ambridge, under the point system, has an advantage of less than 10 points over its neighboring rival, but if both teams come through with victories this week, the committee likely will order a playoff between the two survivors.

Both Ambridge and Beaver Falls have played seven class A opponents, one more than required by the league rules. Both are meeting class A opponents in their final games and in event they score victories, a post-season game would be the logical method to settle the issue. Ellwood City plays at Ambridge tomorrow and New Brighton at Beaver Falls Thursday.

Jeannette and New Castle, battling neck-and-neck for the class AA Conference championship, also wind up their campaigns on Thursday. Jeannette plays its fifth Conference opponent by engaging Greensburg, likewise undefeated, but tied by Wilkinsburg, in a battle at Greensburg, while New Castle meets Turtle Creek Union at New Castle.

MAY ORDER GAME

If both teams manage to score victories, the committee likely will decide on a post-season playoff despite the fact Jeannette will show five Conference triumphs to four for New Castle. At the time the Conference was organized at the Fort Pitt Hotel it was stipulated by the sponsors that only four Conference games would serve as a basis of determining the winner. A team playing five games would receive no more credit than a member engaging in four contests.

The W. P. I. A. L. football committee meets this afternoon in the Fort Pitt Hotel to discuss reclassification of schools. Steps may be taken to strengthen the Class AA Conference.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: MYSTERIOUS STEEL BLOCKS—Shiny little blocks of steel, with dimensions so accurate that they reduce error in measurement to less than four millionths of an inch, are the keystone of this modern mass production age. WAYNESBURG'S FINE RECORD SPOILED

By JESS CARVER

John Q. Weather took a sucker-punch at the college football program over the weekend and what he did to the footballers was plenty. He made good football almost an impossibility, added further to already sad record the game has made this year in drawing out the cash customers and spoiled some otherwise good records with defeats and ties.

We might have had a scoreless tie out here in the Stadium as Pitt and Carnegie Tech engaged in their nineteenth meeting had it not been for some alert work on the part of the Tarentum Fireman, Harvey Rooker, star sophomore end on the Pitt team. Rooker recovered Stu Dueger's tough fumble and set the stage for the winning touchdown.

TOUGH FOR DUEGER

I've noticed that no one seems to blame Dueger for his miscue. The ball was wet and treacherous to handle, and Stu took that punt with three Panthers charging down on him. If you've ever stood out there in the middle of a huge bowl, with a twisting ball sailing toward you and four or five young huskies charging down the field, ready to knock you loose from your ears the minute you get your mitts on the ball, you'll appreciate the spot the safety man is on. Of course, your correspondent never has experienced the sensation, either, my flirtations with sudden death having taken other forms, such as hopping freights and playing with matches.

Pitt won the ball game, Tech put up a brilliant battle and Warren Heller continued his consistent play. A chain, they say, is no stronger than its weakest link. In Pitt's case, it looks like the strongest link is holding together the entire chain. Heller is the kingpin of the We-Don't-Give-A-Hoot A. C., as this very, very scar-ooy Pitt team has been nicknamed.

WAYNESBURG BEATEN

Waynesburg's Yellow Jackets found the road to an unbeaten season too tough and buried their stingers in the mud of the gridiron at Montgomery, W. Va., losing to Ken Schroyer's powerful New River State Golden Bears. It was a bitter pill for the Jackets, but they still have the tri-state and Conference title in their possession.

With Waynesburg finally knocked off, Pitt rules the district roost, and stays right up at the top of the battle for Eastern and National honors. The boys can point with derision at the ties with Ohio State and Nebraska, but they can't laugh off those defeats served Army, Notre Dame and Penn, and if you'll look in the book you'll see where two or three other major elevens would have been tickled to death to have tied Ohio and Nebraska. Yes, sir, yes siree.

Geneva won its annual tussle with Westminster, 19-0, and will get right down to hard work today preparing for the game here Tuesday with the Dukes. The Night Riders returned to nocturnal battling Friday night, and played a scoreless tie with Catholic University.

ARMY TESTED

Little West Virginia Wesleyan gave the Army a busy afternoon, and even though the Cadet reserves were in there most of the time, the Soldiers came mighty close to being held even. At that you should take a peek at that Army reserve eleven. They'd look mighty swell parading as a varsity a lot of places.

West Virginia had to stage a noble rally to beat Cam Henderson's light but well-drilled and hard-fighting Davis-Elkins crew. The game was no cakewalk for the Mountaineers.

Wash-Jeff's second excursion into the Midwest was as disastrous as its first. Early in the season, the Presidents lost to Detroit University, and Saturday were taken over by Marquette.

Two of the district Teachers' College teams went into the eastern part of the state and brought back one victory and one defeat. Slippery Rock lost to Lock Haven, 6-0, and Indiana beat Shippensburg, 7-6.

WEST LIBERTY HOT

West Liberty piled up the biggest score of the year recorded anywhere by trampling poor little Cedarville under a 137-to-0 count. If Cedarville had scored, it would have looked like a track meet.

Grove City and Thiel couldn't get the water bailed out of the field at Grove City and postponed their game until Wednesday. Allegheny and Bethany, with about the poorest records of 'em all, played to a scoreless deadlock.

This week, the Dukes have Geneva to get past; Carnegie Tech must get set for New York U. and Pitt has the invasion of Pop Warner and his Stanford Indians on its hands. Wash-Jeff and West Virginia will battle in their annual clash Sat'day in Wheeling, and Davis-Elkins has nothing soft ahead in this up and coming band of footballers from St. Vincent.

PACKERS LOSE FIRST FRAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Green Bay's astonishing march toward another National Professional Football League championship finally has been checked.

For the first time this season, the Champion Packers ran into a club that could beat them as they surrendered to a surprisingly alert New York Giant eleven, 6-0, here yesterday. In nine previous games, the Packers had won eight and fought the Chicago Bears to a scoreless tie the other.

The Giants, with their line the deciding factor, stopped Green Bay's running and passing attack and recovered a Packer fumble at midfield to pave the way for the only touchdown of the game in the second period. Passes took the ball across the goal line in three plays, the last one being a long heave from McBride to Flaherty.

The Portsmouth Spartans and Chicago Bears, each beaten only once this season, remained in the chase by posting fairly easy victories. The Spartans overturned Boston, 10-0, as John Cavosie plunged through for a touchdown in the second period and Dutch Clark booted a field goal in the third.

The Bears walloped Brooklyn, 20-0, with Red Grange, Keith Molesworth and Dick Nesbitt scoring touchdowns.

Stapleton swept through the Chicago Cardinals, 21-7, with Bob Campiglio counting twice and Ken Strong once. The Cardinal score came on a pass from Homer to Kessel.

Munhall Captain In Hospital

Matthew Cullen, 17, of 2113 Orchard avenue, Munhall, captain of the Munhall High School football teams, is recovering today at the Homestead Hospital from head injuries suffered Saturday in the Munhall - Homestead football game, according to a hospital report.

SPORT VIGNETTES

What's the matter with the Pitt football team? . . . That is the question the local fans have been asking aver since the letdown following the 12-0 victory over Notre Dame . . . The team, which gave unmistakable signs of greatness through the early weeks of the season, has lost its sparkle and punch, with the result that it includes in its record two scoreless ties, with Ohio State and Nebraska, a close 19-12 call with Pennsylvania, and that narrow 6-0 squeak over Carnegie Tech, last Saturday.

A close analysis of the situation presents the answer in an unmistakable manner . . . In past years it has been true that Pitt football teams have been at their best and almost unbeatable in November . . . That was because their hard games were bunched in that month and the players were rated along slowly to reach a late peak . . . This year the schedule has been tough from the very beginning, the development of the team was rushed and it went prematurely over the hill.

Pitt opened with a 47-0 victory over Ohio Northern on September 24. . . . The first Saturday in October saw it crush West Virginia (which was slow to get going, but has beaten Marquette, Georgetown, Wash-Lee and Davis and Elkins in its last four starts), 40-0. . . . Then followed a 33-0 win over Duquesne and then that stirring 18-13 victory over a better than usual Army eleven at West Point. . . . That brought the team up to the next to last Saturday in October with four flashy wins under its belt for a meeting with Ohio State, which resulted in a scoreless tie, with the players not yet over the effects of their bruising battle with the Cadets and their minds on the Notre Dame game a week ahead. . . . Came then the surprise 12-0 victory over the Irish in a game in which the Panthers were at their best and able to rise to the occasion. . . . It was their climatic point, and they haven't been themselves since.

November now was at hand, and what did it bring? . . . The Penn game and a close call from defeat. . . . The Nebraska game and another scoreless tie. . . Then, last Saturday, almost another scoreless tie on a muddy field with a subnormal Carnegie Tech eleven in a game which resulted in a 6-0 victory only through the medium of a fumbled punt by Tech on its four-yard line. . . . Next Saturday comes the grand finale against Pop Warner's thrice-beaten and once-tied Stanford eleven at the Stadium, which promises to be a keen test despite the spotted records of the teams.

Here we see, as we review the season, the usual order of things reversed. . . . Whereas Pitt teams usually have been at their peak in November, this one was below normal throughout the month. . . . The reason? . . . The back-break-

Clifford Montgomery, of Natrona Heights, has been elected captain of the 1933 Columbia University eleven. Montgomery, one of the leading quarterbacks of the country, starred for Har-Brack Union High during his high school days, and later performed brilliantly at Kiski.

Montgomery's brother, Harry, is quarterback and field general at North Carolina, and a former teammate at Har-Brack, Frank Murdock, is a star tackle at Cornell.

CARDS LEAVE FOR EAST

STANFORD, Cal., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—With increased confidence as the result of the scoreless tie with California Saturday, 34 Stanford players left here yesterday for Pittsburgh, where they will meet Pittsburgh's Panthers next Saturday.

Coach Glenn Warner was highly pleased with the showing of his Cardinals, who went into the California game as a decided shortender. Others in the party included Assistant Coaches Tiny Thornhill and Jimmy (Rabbit) Bradshaw.

Central Loop May Be Expanded

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Plans to mould the Central Baseball League into a strong Class B loop were formed at a meeting of club owners here yesterday.

President Frederick W. Howell, of Dayton, O., presided.

While the definite makeup of the revised circuit is still uncertain many towns are seeking franchises, and its officials believe it will include most of the members of the old Central League of years ago.

The six cities now reported ready for membership in the league are Dayton, O.; Fort Wayne, Evansville, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Springfield, O., and Terre Haute. Two other towns to fill out an eight-club circuit are expected to be chosen from the following cities: Muncie, Richmond, Anderson and Gary, Ind.; Lima, O., and Muskegon, Mich.

Erie, Pa., and Youngstown, O., were in the league last year, but are not included in the new organization.

TECH REAL FIGHTING TEAM AGAINST PITT—HARPSTER

PLAID BEATEN OUT ONLY BY BAD 'BREAK'

By Howard Harpster

Geneva College Coach; All-American Quarterback, Carnegie Tech, 1928.

H. Harpster

Pitt's undefeated football team ran into a fighting Carnegie Tech eleven Saturday at the Stadium and won by a 6-to-0 score, a game which should have resulted in a scoreless tie. Unable to pierce the airtight defense which the Skibos threw up when the Pitt team came within scoring distance, the Panthers pushed over a touchdown half-way through the third period, after receiving a break which every coach dreams about and which few ever get.

Tech seemingly had everything well in hand when Tesser punted out of bounds on the Pitt one-yard line after six minutes of play in the third quarter. With 99 yards to go for a touchdown, it appeared as if the Panther cause was slowly fading. The Pitt team hadn't been able to score on several previous occasions when it was quite close to the Tech goal, so how could it be expected to advance the ball 99 yards for a score now? Well, it did just that, and how it did it proves more conclusively than ever that this great game of football is the world's most uncertain sport.

TIDE TURNS SWIFTLY

From their own one-yard line, the Panthers kicked out to their 47-yard line, a very fine kick. On the next play, Pitt intercepted a Tech pass on the Pitt 37-yard line. Three line plays netted only seven yards, and the Pitt team was forced to kick. The Carnegie safety man fumbled the ball and Pitt recovered on Tech's four-yard line for a first down. From the above it can be seen that the Panthers, starting from their own one-yard line, had the ball on the Tech four-yard line in just six plays, for a total gaing of 95 yards. Yet in all of the 95 yards gained in the six plays, the Panthers earned only seven yards by good, honest scrimmaging, and the other 88 yards must be classed under the breaks of the game. They tell you a team makes its own breaks, which is quite true in many ways, but a team can't make the opposing safety man fumble a punt; that just happens, and it was unfortunate for Tech that it had to happen at a time when it meant so much.

With the ball on the four-yard line and with four downs in which to make the score, the Tech team might have folded up and called it quits, but, instead, it rose up and fought back harder than ever. Warren Heller, who is a certain choice for an all-America halfback berth, and who without doubt is the best running back Pitt has had for many years, tried three times to cross the Skibo goal, and three times he was stopped short of his mark. Finally, on fourth down, Weinstock crashed the center of the line for the score. Tech had made a wonderful fight to stave off the touchdown, but its efforts were not quite good enough, and Weinstock's buck won the game, 6 to 0.

RECALLS '27 GAME

By a strange coincidence, a series of events almost exactly the same as those described herein happened in the Pitt-Tech game of 1927. Pitt again was the decided favorite, and, during the first quarter and part of the second, Tech surprised by not only holding the Pitt team well in hand, but by showing an effective offense. Halfway through the second period, Pitt kicked and apparently the ball was going across the goal line for a touchback. It struck on the two or three-yard line, spun dizzily backward and brushed Letzelter, of Tech, in the leg. Pitt recovered on the three-yard line for a first down.

Capt. Gibby Welch carried the ball three times and failed to cross the goal. On fourth down, he tried again and was met at the scrimmage line by a mass of red jerseys. After much delay in untangling the pile, it was decided by a referee that a touchdown had been scored, and said decision was the subject for much dispute for many days.

As a matter of record, one of the sports writers of a local paper who had the reputation of being decidedly impartial to either school, covered the game from the field and during the play in question stood on the goal line. Referring to the touchdown play in his Monday column, he said:

"And speaking of the first Pitt touchdown, the ball hasn't yet crossed the Tech goal."

FIRST SCORE BIGGEST

Pitt won the game, 23 to 6, so the first score likely wouldn't have changed the outcome, although it usually is the first score that is the important one. It's like when the person to the right of the dealer cuts the cards—if he had cut one card deeper, you wouldn't have got the hand the dealer gave you. Without that first touchdown, there is no doubt the game would have taken a different course, but my honest opinion is that the Panthers that year would have defeated Tech regardless of that first break.

CHICAGO COACH DIRECTS TEAM AGAINST WISCONSIN IN FINAL APPEARANCE AS MENTOR OF MAROONS

Retired because of his age, Old Man Amos Alonso Stagg, for 41 years football coach at the University of Chicago, bade an adieu to the game last Saturday as his team bowed to Wisconsin, 18-7. TRACK RECORDS APPROVED

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—Benjamin Eastman, of California—fastest quarter-miler of all time!

The record committee of the Amateur Athletic Union yesterday approved the run of the Stanford trackster in time of 0:46.4 for 440 yards, and it was said adoption of the report by the A. A. U. at its forty-fourth annual convention opening today was a mere formality.

Although he failed to win the Intercollegiate, National or Olympic quarter-mile (or 400-meter) championships, the committee after an hour's argument approved Eastman's run in a dual track meet on the Stanford campus on March 26, 1932.

Edward F. Schaefer, of Buffalo, opposed passing the record, despite the fact it was backed up by affidavits of California judges, timers, referees and other officials, but the committee finally approved the figures and today Eastman will be rated better than Bill Carr, of Pennsylvania, the man who beat him three times.

Eastman's record supplants that of 47 2-5 seconds made by Ted Meredith in 1916.

880 MARK ACCEPTED

The Stanford runner's new American half-mile record of 1:50.9, set in San Francisco in June, was accepted without debate.

Practically all important track and field records were approved in committee. Exceptions were Ralph Montague's 20.6 for the 200 meters, made in California, and records of Paul De Bruyn for races of from 21 to 25 miles, made in New York.

Ralph Hill, Oregon, who was maneuvered out of the Olympic 5,000-meter title, was given American possession of the 5,000-meter mark of 14:30, with Lauri Lehtinen, Finland. Award of the national boxing championships was left to a committee of Roy Davis, of Chicago; Tom Lockhart, of New York, and William P. Kenney, of Boston.

CHICAGO GETS MEET

The track and field committee approved the award of the national senior and junior championships and decathlon to Chicago, the indoor championships to New York, the penthalon to New Jersey, the senior four-wall championship for Chicago, the junior championship to Yale, the senior one-wall and hard-ball championships to New York. The 50,000-meter walk was tentatively given to Baltimore, and the seven-mile walk to Cincinnati.

The boxing committee voted to ban all "special" bouts and place all tournaments on an "open" basis.

A proposal to remove hockey from the A. A. U. control was voted down.

THE GREAT OUTDOORS

—By GIB MARSH—

Although it is contended that legal deer, bucks with pointed antlers, may not be found in the same large numbers in Pennsylvania as in the 1931 season, the influx of hunters into the mountains on December 1 is expected to be larger than last year. It is estimated there will be 300,000 hunters along the mountain ranges. This seems likely with so many unemployed, hunters being provided an opportunity to hunt and remain in the mountains longer than usual.

Deer may be scarce in sections as a result of the enormous bag of last year, with nearly 100,000 legal kills, but it is estimated there were nearly 10,000 head of illegal deer left in the woods. With 300,000 hunters in the woods, 20,000 head of legal bucks should be killed this year.

With does and bucks in season last year, the hunting was not difficult. It did not require much ranging on the part of the hunters to encounter deer herds. Deer were too plentiful. The purpose of the open season was to reduce them, especially the does, but during the coming season the hunters will have to comb out the mountains thoroughly for legal bucks.

The hunters will be required to do more tramping and venture into the so-called inaccessible regions in order to find big game, but they will do that—hunt hard. The record kill in this state of legal bucks was nearly 23,000 head in the season of 1929. The total kill last year was estimated at 94,722 head. Later this estimate was increased to the 100,000 mark, and chiefly does were killed.

Should the kill of legal bucks total only 20,000 during next month, many hunters will return home without sporting antlered bucks on the running boards of their automobiles. A division of 15 head among each group of 1,000 hunters will be scant. However, the bagging of a deer is not important with thousands of the hunters who will be in the mountains. They will be there for the pleasure of the outing and to enjoy a few days of hunting camp life.

Gelbert Removed To Philly Hospital

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Charley Gelbert, St. Louis Cardinal shortstop who accidentally shot himself while hunting, today was removed to the Hannemann Hospital in Philadelphia. His wife and mother rode with him in an ambulance for the 150-mile trip.

A nerve in Gelbert's left foot was severed and will need special treatment, physicians said.

Contest Winners Await Arrival of Warner

Entrants in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Pop Warner Question Quest for prizes will have to wait an extra day to learn of the winners, it developed today, with the news that Warner will not arrive here in time to pick the winners in time for the Trained Seals' weekly broadcast over WCAE Wednesday evening.

Warner will not get into Pittsburgh with his Cardinals until more than an hour after the Seals take the air, and will pore over the thousands of letters submitted in the contest the following day. Announcement of the winners will follow in Friday's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, instead of the day before, following the Seals' weekly spiel.

16 PRIZES OFFERED

The rules for the contest remain the same, however. The deadline for submitting questions still is Tuesday at midnight.

Ten sets of two tickets each for the Pitt-Stanford game of Saturday will be awarded by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. In addition, Warner is giving as personal prizes six all-America football blankets of the finest make.

TIME GROWS SHORT

All you have to do to become a contestant is to write in a question on a football topic of general interest which you would like to have the veteran coach answer during his All-America Board of Football - Pittsburgh Sun - Telegraph-Postum broadcast over a Columbia national hookup through WJAS Friday night. The questions chosen will be such as will appeal to listeners everywhere and therefore cannot be strictly local in nature.

You have only about 24 more hours in which to prepare and mail your entry. DO IT NOW!

POINT LEADERS HOLD POSTS

The leaders held their positions in the tri-state college scoring race over the weekend, as the weather cut heavily into the point-getting of the collegians.

Izzy Weinstock, Pitt's big fullback, clambered into fifth position with his touchdown against Carnegie, and now boasts 32 points, one point more than Rab Currie, Waynesburg ace, who was held in check as the Yellow Jackets dropped their first and only game to New River State.

Two members of the West Virginia varsity gained the brack of those having 24 points, Thomas and Marker each accounting for their fourth touchdowns. Parriott, another Mountaineer star, gained seven points and now sports 22.

Trioana, Geneva, the leader; Heller, of Pitt; Allen, of West Virginia, and McDonald, of Duquese, all drew blanks.

The records follow:

BUSH NEAR TITLE

Associated Press.

Lou Bush, of Massachusetts State, apparently has clinched the National individual football scoring championship.

Although held scoreless by Tufts Saturday, Bush's 114 points put him far in advance of the runner-up, Ralph Graham, of Kansas State, and Carroll Broderick, of West Kentucky Teachers, who holds third place.

The leader in each of the nation's 10 leading groups or Conferences follows:

Player and College.	Td.	Pat.	Fld.	Tld.
East—Bush, Massachusetts State	19	0	0	114
Big Six—Ralph Graham, Kansas State	13	7	0	85

ALMGREN NEAR CHESS TITLE

Charles Orr, who handed S. A. Almgren his only defeat as the latter annexed the West Penn chess championship last season, today appeared to be the major stumbling block in Almgren's advance toward the 1932 championship.

Almgren still has to meet two former champions, but he won his fifth straight match at the expense of Joseph Firestone at the Pittsburgh Chess Club Saturday, and today is so strongly entrenched in the lead that he appears virtually certain to repeat.

Almgren's triumph over Firestone was unusually interesting in that the champion sacrificed two major pieces in winning. The manner in which he achieved victory was as follows:

Welch to Return As Grid Coach

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 21.—Gibby Welch, all-America halfback with the Pitt Panthers in 1927, will return to Morris-Harvey College as football coach next fall, it was announced here last night by Tom Nilan, brother of John Nilan, athletic director at the Barboursville School.

Nilan stated that Red Weaver, who coached the team this year and failed to win a game in eight starts, had been asked to resign. Weaver succeeded Welch as head mentor this fall after the Parkersburg star had resigned.

Nilan also stated that Morris-Harvey is planning a change in athletic policy.

Jeby Boxes Devlin For Middle 'Title'

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—A new middleweight boxing champion may be crowned here tonight—champion at least in New York. Ben Jeby, New Yorker, meets Chick Devlin, of California, for 15 rounds, and the New York Commission will recognize the winner as champion.

PEE WEE JARRELL

Funny man of the boxing arenas, who returns here to box Eddie (Kid) Wolfe, of Memphis, in the main bout at Motor Square Garden tonight. He goes over big with the fans.

NATIONAL GRID TITLE RACE MUDDLED

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Sectional titles in half the nation's eight major conferences have been decided definitely, but arguments over the mythical national championship rage more furiously than ever.

With some slight trepidation, however, the suggestion is ventured that when and if the dispute is satisfactorily settled, the nomination will go to one of a group including Southern California, Michigan, Auburn, Pitt, Army, Notre Dame and either Brown or Colgate, depending upon the outcome of their Thanksgiving Day game at Providence.

SEVERAL ON SPOT

Several of these are certain to be eliminated in the next two or three weeks. Southern California, in addition to a Conference game with Washington, must play Notre Dame December 10, two weeks after the Ramblers' clash with Army. Pitt, conqueror of both Army and Notre Dame, but tied by Ohio State and Nebraska, still has the Stanford hurdle to vault. Brown and Colgate should cut the list by one in their meeting this week. Michigan has completed its schedule, and Auburn has only South Carolina on the list.

Conference races already decided show the following new or repeating champions:

Big Ten—Michigan.
Big Six—Nebraska.
Rocky Mountain—Utah.
Missouri Valley — Oklahoma A. and M.

The leaders in the other four conference or sectional races, not yet definitely decided, were:

Southwest—Texas Christian.
Pacific—Southern California and University of California at Los Angeles.
South—Auburn.
East—Brown, Colgate, Pitt, Army.

Saturday's firing, one of the last big salvos of the waning season, offered few surprises except in the scores, as all the leading favorites won, although, in some instances, by much narrower margins than had been expected. Weather conditions—a driving rain in the East and intense cold in the Midwest—were responsible for some of these surprises.

IRISH SINK NAVY

Notre Dame, traveling the comeback road after its defeat by Pitt, ran into a stout-hearted Navy defense, but won, 12-0. Yet the East countered this intersectional defeat with Fordham's 8-to-6 triumph over Oregon State. The Midwest chalked up two other intersectional victories as Marquette whipped Washington and Jefferson, 6-0, and Creighton handed Wyoming a 34-0 lacing, but suffered one reverse as Gonzaga beat South Dakota, 12-0.

The eastern program was featured by Yale's great show of strength in beating Harvard, 19-0. Pitt and Army eked out one-touchdown victories, the former beating Carnegie Tech, 6-0, and Army turning back West Virginia Wesleyan, 7-0, but Columbia and Holy Cross found the muddy going too much of a handicap and played scoreless ties with Syracuse and Manhattan, respectively. Temple's undefeated record was marred by Villanova, 7-0, and Lafayette climaxed an otherwise dismal season with a 25-to-6 rout of its traditional rival, Lehigh.

BIG TEN PICKS ALL-STARS

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Ohio State's stars upset the all-star Beg Ten football team this year.

Although engulfed in an erratic season, the Buckeyes tied Michigan in placing players on the all-star team selected for the Associated Press by coaches, landing three berths in the line and backfield. Purdue placed two players while the other three positions went to outstanding aces from Wisconsin, Illinos and Minnesota.

Henry Newman, spark plug of Michigan's title drive, was the only unanimous choice of the coaches, who selected Purdue's drop kicking ace, Paul Pardonner, for the quarterback of the second team.

The selections follow:

First Team—		Second Team.
Moss, Purdue	L. E.	Robinson, Minn.
Wells, Minn.	L. T.	Wistert, Mich.

CUTTING, GOLF LEADER, DEAD

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—The golfing world sustained a heavy loss today as a consequence of the sudden death of Robert Myron Cutting, president of the United States Golf Association and for many years a leading figure in the sport.

Elected to head the U. S. G. A. only last week, cutting died unexpectedly last night at the home of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Bartelme, in suburban Hubbard Woods. He was 50. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Cutting's wife, Mary Bartelme Cutting, was at his side when the end came. A resident at the Hinsdale Golf Club, Cutting acted as vice president of the U. S. G. A. until his recent elevation to the presidency. He formerly was president of the Western Golf Association. During his youth he was a star on the University of Michigan baseball team.

SHOCK TO RAMSAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Herbert H. Ramsay, retiring president of the United States Golf Association, said today that the death of Robert M. Cutting, of Chicago, nominated to succeed him, "came as a terrible shock." He added:

"In the administration of the game in this country he was a leading figure for several years. His influence will be sorely missed."

Cutting, long prominent in western golf circles, was made a member of the executive committee of the U. S. G. A. in 1929 and elevated to a vice presidency in 1930.

Cutting's death was the second which has come to a nominee for the presidency of the U. S. G. A. before election. In 1927 Charles O. Pfeil, of Memphis, Tenn., died two weeks after his nomination. In the U. S. G. A., nomination by the nominating committee always had been tantamount to election.

St. Thomas Wins Over LaSalle, 24-0

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—St. Thomas College gridders ran rough-shod over LaSalle College of Philadelphia yesterday, 24 to 0, to chalk up their sixth victory of the season.

The Tommies got the jump on the Philadelphians by tallying two touchdowns in the first period, Pete Tabone carrying the ball over both times. Late in the third quarter, Gatto plunged through from the eight-yard stripe to register the third six-pointer and a long pass, Kucab to Green, netted the final touchdown early in the fourth period.

Sing Sing Team Held to Draw

OSSINING, N. Y., Nov. 21.—(AP.)—With their backs to the wall, the Sing Sing "Black Sheep" fought valiantly yesterday and staved off a gridiron defeat at the hands of the Danbury Trojans. The final score was 6 to 6, the first tie game since the convicts started playing football last year.

STOCKS SOGGY AS TRADING DWINDLES

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—Enough selling oozed through the stock market today to give the list a rather soggy appearance.

The market was very dull, and selling was in insufficient volume to indicate a decided trend. The market opened a little higher, but the Radio consent decree brought considerable selling into Radio Corporation, and with steel production showing some slackening, sentiment was easily dampened.

The selling of Radio was regarded as partly for short account. Wall street, in the main, had been expecting the consent decree, under which General Electric and Westinghouse Electric will dispose of their holdings of Radio Corporation stock, and the patent pooling arrangement will be discontinued. In a number of quarters, relief was expressed that the long-pending anti-trust controversy had at least been composed. Another development in anti-trust actions of interest to Wall street was the decision of the Supreme Court to review the decision against the soft coal operators in the lower court, in the case of Appalachian Coals, Inc., in which they sought to pool their sales efforts.

Most of the weekend surveys of investment services stressed the impending war debt controversy as injecting an element of uncertainty, with the prospect that developments might bring a further drop in sterling exchange, with consequent unsettlement of commodities. Of developments in Washington, one which was viewed hopefully was the discussion of paring government expenses. The United States Chamber of Commerce published a survey showing that a good start had been made in cutting state and local taxation, with savings of nearly $500,000,000 a year already made.

A slight increase in freight movement on the Santa Fe was reported for the week ended November 19, leading to the hope that the sharp drop in loadings in the week ended November 12 may have been in part due to election day. An upturn in loadings in November, however, for carriers generally, would be in sharp contrast to the usual seasonal trend. Santa Fe's loadings of 25,644 cars in the week ended November 19 compared with 25,182 in the preceding week.

COTTON SLIDES ON SELLING

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Cotton futures opened steady, 1-3 lower under increased December liquidation and foreign selling. December, 6.10; January, 6.16; March, 6.25; May, 6.35; July, 6.47; October, 6.61.

Liquidation or scattered selling became more active as prices worked off, however, and there may have been some selling on the census report which placed ginnings prior to November 14 at 10,532,745 bales, which was somewhat above expectations.

The easier tone in the stock market was also a factor on the decline which carried December off to 6.04c and May to 6.30c, or about 8 to 10 points net lower.

There were rallies of 3 or 4 points later in the morning encouraged by relative steadiness in Liverpool and Liverpool buying here at a widening of the differences between the two markets. This demand tapered off after the close of the English market and trading was quiet at midday with active months ruling about 5 to 8 points net lower.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 21.—Cotton, no receipts. Spot moderate business done; prices 3 points lower; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 6.20; good middling, 5.95; strict middling, 5.70; middling, 5.50; strict low middling, 5.35; low middling, 5.20; strict good ordinary, 5.00; good ordinary, 4.70; futures closed steady, December, 5.24; January, 5.23; March, 5.24; May, 5.26; July, 5.27; October, 5.29.

Says Montour Link No Ground for Suit

EAST LIVERPOOL, O., Nov. 21.—Prosecuting Attorney John E. Bauknecht today refused to become a party to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's battle to halt the Montour Railroad Company construction of a 13-mile outlet for the Youngstown steel district.

He refused the request of J. B. Maley, East Liverpool yardmaster for the Pennsylvania, to file a taxpayer's suit to recover portions of three Columbiana County highways, used as grade crossings.

In a letter to Attorney W. I. Kinsey, Pennsylvania counsel, Bauknecht wrote:

"I do not consider the matter a subject for a taxpayer's suit."

New Haven Loses Valuation Case

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(INS.)—The Supreme Court today upheld the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in refusing to include track rights of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad in New York and Boston Terminals in valuing the lines for rate making purposes.

The commission was forced to appeal the case after the District of Columbia Court of Appeals decided in favor of the New Haven.

The case was regarded as important by the commission which said that its method of valuation as already applied in 1,000 instances was involved.

GENERAL TRADE REMAINS IN DOLDRUMS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—General business remains in the deeply subnormal zone, subject at present to adverse seasonal trends in industry.

The continuance of the depression level reflects meagerness of consumer buying power. This goes back to the virtual pauperization of the 8,500,000 workers on the farms resulting from prevailing agricultural prices, which are not only low absolutely, but which give farmers an inadequate exchange value for the products of industry. This in turn greatly depresses the factories and adds significantly to the adverse factors making for industrial unemployment. Urban labor, with the blight of 10,000,000 unemployed, many millions on part-time employment only, and others employed at greatly reduced wage rates, is likewise in no position to consume effectively on a scale commensurate with the productive power of the American business machine.

Mr. Rukeyser

With these adverse factors at work, hopes of a significant upturn in business, after the rally from the extreme lows of the summer, have been dashed to the ground.

Business is further blocked by the lack of balance between existing capitalization and debt, on the one hand, and current volume of trade expressed in money terms, on the other. Among economists there have been two schools of thought as to what should be done. One, including numerous leading British authorities, have favored controlled inflation as a means of restoring the price level to the basis which prevailed when outstanding debt was contracted, thus correcting the rise in the real burden of debt which has been bearing so heavily on debtors everywhere. The other school, turning its face against inflation in any form, has indicated that scaling down of debt contracts would be in order.

At the moment, the latter school seems to have the upper hand, though the two methods of relief are not necessarily mutually exclusive. A limited reflation would certainly cushion the violence of the readjustment.

The attention of the public has been diverted from the broad question of outstanding debts and the deflated price level, which adversely affects all debtors alike, by the broad maneuver for revision of inter-allied governmental debts. As a matter of fact, unlike other debtors, these governments have already benefitted from important voluntary downward adjustments and from a year's moratorium. Private and corporate debtors have been less generously treated.

ROONEYS PLAY TO TIE WITH BELLAIRE

By TOM BIRKS

Playing inspired football, the Bellaire Eagles, of Bellaire, O., battled the Champion J. P. Rooneys to a scoreless tie at Greenlee Field yesterday afternoon. The contest marked the closing game of the West Penn Conference season for the Rooneys, who now have completed two seasons without meeting defeat.

Bellaire, one of the most powerful sandlot clubs that ever invaded Pittsburgh, contested every inch of the way. Twice in the first half of the game, the Big Green machine was in scoring distance, within the 15-yard line, but Bellaire took the ball on downs.

QUATSE, LANTZ STAR

Jess Quatse and Mose Lantz were playing great football in the Rooney line, Lantz in particular smearing many Buckeye plays, Charley Tully, former Pitt star, was a giant in the Bellaire defense.

In the second period a beautiful play, engineered by Bud Devinney and Jimmy Clark, nearly put the game on ice.

Ducky Holmes, the former West Liberty star, who matched kicking prowess with Jimmy Rooney all afternoon, got off a good punt, from his own 20-yard line to the Rooney 40-yard stripe.

Devinney took the punt, and when about to be tackled hurled a perfect lateral pass to Clark, who reversed his field to run the ball back 40 yards. He nearly eluded the safety man.

EAGLES' DEFENSE STRONG

The Eagles' defense held up, however, and the Rooneys were unable to advance the ball from that point. It was one of the greatest games played here this season.

The McKeesport-East Liberty Papale game was called off by the home management. The lineup:

Jas. P. Rooneys—0.		Eagles—0.
Guarnieri	L.E.	Glasgow
Quatse	L.T.	Tully

CURRY ANNEXES CUP BATTLE

The Curry Soccer Club proved successful in its national amateur cup game with the Union Switch and Signal eleven at South Park yesterday afternoon, the Keystoners winning a great game, 4 goals to 3, before a record crowd.

It was a brilliant day for soccer. The Central League club after being two goals down at the half, staged a great comeback to give Curry a scare.

Innocenti and Charley Powell scored for Curry in the first half of the game, while Fred Cimerolli added the third. Then Brown scored on a penalty kick and George Hart tallied the second. M. Cimerolli scored the fourth goal for the victors and Murray tallied for the Switch. The lineup:

Louisa Objects to Dances And Joyce Begins to Attend Secretly

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Winter came in stormily. Tea dancing engrossed the youngsters. Shaded lights and an orchestra playing, gilt on the ceilings and cream in the tea, boys and girls embraced, moving to music and laughter over a polished floor. Louisa did not approve of tea dances. Dances were well enough in their place. One entered a ballroom, with dignity and poise, one had little white cards swung by a ribbon from a gloved wrist, correct young men wrote their names upon it with an infinitesimal pencil. The music had restraint. Chaperons sat along the walls. Supper was early and homecoming followed.

In her time dances had been conducted along these lines of self-respect and decency. But now. She attended one tea dance with her grandchild and turned down the thumb. Lax music, a bewildering change of partners, some of them unpresented, nameless, a vicious display of ankle, a closeness of embrace, young girls rouged and smoking cigarets, the whole affair brazenly in public, in a place which any one might enter, a graceless and undisciplined exhibition. Joyce might not attend any more tea dances.

Joyce listened gravely to the ultimatum. Her mouth, grimmer at 16 than her mother's had ever been, set hard. She said nothing at all, with a fine air of docility.

But she talked it over, later, with her most precious friend, Yvonne Harkness. Yvonne was pink and blue and gold, an angel from a frieze, with great, innocent eyes and the whispering voice of a good child. She was mischief masquerading as a novice to sainthood. She lived in the newest of apartments with a blonde mother whose divorce had been accomplished with dignity.

Synopsis

Mrs. Louisa Sheldon has lorded it over her daughter-in-law, Elizabeth, even before the death of the latter's husband, Lennox. Pneumonia killed Lennox a few days after he was married. Louisa and Elizabeth went abroad, where a girl, Joyce, was born. They return to New York City. Ten years pass. Elizabeth never thought of remarriage until induced to attend social affairs with Fred Van Alstyne, college chum of her deceased husband. Fred proposes marriage, she accepts, and tells Mrs. Sheldon. The latter startles Elizabeth by asking her if she intends "telling" Fred all details of her romance with Lennox. Elizabeth writes Fred, breaking off their engagement. She persistently refuses to see him. Joyce begins to tire of her grandmother's constant vigilance.

Now Go On

DISLIKES TO LIE

"Poor father," Yvonne had commented, "I can't blame him. It must be the devil to be rich and good looking—and married!"

To Yvonne, after school, Joyce brought her troubles.

"Well," pronounced her friend, sagely, "what they don't know can't hurt them."

Joyce pondered.

Yvonne chuckled, lightly.

"Are they honest? Oh, don't bother to answer. Do any of them move with the times? Not they, they think the world antebellum. Even mother. She goes out, she has what she calls a good time, dancing, men and all. She's a thousand times more modern than your two—she thinks! But honest? Not she! Three years ago I asked her some questions. Not that I didn't know, vaguely, but I wanted to be set straight. Did I get an answer? I did not. I got a dim sort of lecture on—well, not storks and cabbage leaves exactly, but the beauty of innocence and wait until you're older and don't listen to horrid girls talking in corners. Oh, a lot of stuff about flowers and bloom and wouldn't you like the new frock we saw in Hollander's last week? An expensive way to change the subject, wasn't it? Oh, they make me sick, the lot of them. Hugh Masterson and Petie Garret want us to go somewhere and dance Saturday. Are you game?"

Joyce hesitated.

"I hate lying—" she began.

JOYCE CONSENTS

Yvonne regarded her ironically from eyes which looked as if they had never gazed on anything more material than bluebells and seraphims.

"Of course you do," she agreed, "we all do. But it can't be avoided. Where would you get if you always told the truth? Do you want to sit in the nursery and speak when you're spoken to? Don't you want any sort of freedom at all?" She waited for Joyce's nod and went on, briskly. "Of course you do. Well, you won't get it by asking for it—pretty—please. You've got to take it."

"But they'll ask me where—"

"Well, tell them—something. Tell them you are coming to my house to cut out paper dolls, drink cambric tea and read a little Pollyanna. Your grandmother approves of me, she's told me so. Even if Mother is divorced from Father," concluded Yvonne, sedately, "think how courteously she did it. We are still in the social register, Father under 'Dilatory Domiciles!' Dilatory is very good, I think."

Joyce nodded.

"All right. Saturday then."

After all, where was the harm? That was what hurt her most. Such a good time, the floor and music just right, and Hugh Masterson, a dear sort of person. Had the escapade been wrong, dangerous, even adventurous, she might have been able to see the oblique justice of deceit. But it was none of those things. It was just tea with two nice, correct boys and a dozen dances. And she couldn't go home and say, "I've had the best time!"

THE FIRST STEP

Set to that music the first step was easy enough. There were other steps, not progressive exactly, more marking time. No one reported her. All the girls of her little circle were permitted these, in essence, innocent amusements. It appealed to no one as unusual that she should share them. In an age when chaperonage had been practically discarded and Mrs. Grundy, or some one like her, sat in a dustbin in company with other outworn conventions, Joyce realized that she would have soon companied the legendary old lady had she not struck her veiled blow for freedom. She was 17 in the spring, she'd soon not be asked places if she tacked a proviso on her acceptances, "Of course I'd like to come if I may bring grandmother? Or is your mother to be one of the party?"

She thought, restlessly . . . will it go on like this always? Lying and planning and slipping out and being afraid to get home 10 minutes later than usual? It isn't as if I were doing anything wrong, but I have to make it wrong somehow.

Yvonne, consulted, counselled.

"Marriage, I suppose."

"Married women haven't any more freedom, really."

"Some have—"

"I don't mean that kind—besides that's not marriage."

DISCUSS CAREERS

Yvonne yawned pinkly, and knocked off the ash of her cigaret. The standing ash tray perched a brass emu on the rim of the receiver. An unlikely animal. Yvonne regarded it with complacent affection. The two girls were curled up on the cerulean taffeta bed spread. Beyond the windows the late afternoon sky had clouded, great, round drops of May rain, which even in town were warm and fragrant of fields, came splashing down, like the tears of a baby giant.

"A career then," Yvonne suggested. "Dolly Howe says she's going on the stage. Her family is having kittens over it."

Joyce made a wilful face.

"She won't. Just an idea—because she had the lead in the school play."

"Perhaps. But lots of the girls are planning to do something. Mary's taking a secretarial course after graduation. Her father believes in it."

Joyce announced, suddenly, "Doctor. I've always wanted to be a doctor. Wanted to go to college, to Johns Hopkins. Do they take women? There's a medical college for women somewhere—well, I can't of course. That sort of thing costs money—which I haven't. I mean, of my own. Of course, grandmother wouldn't put up with it—or for it!"

Yvonne looked her astonishment.

"There's no accounting for tastes. I get sick if I see a cut finger."

"So does mother. I don't. Never did."

"You've never said anything before," reflected Yvonne, "but I might have known, just by the things you take to in school. Always tossing around the laboratory after hours and jawing Miss Luden."

"Yes, I like her course. Of course you don't get much of that sort of thing where we are—biology, chemistry." She added, slowly, leaning back against the ruffled blue pillows, "It's not just the healing, you understand, the being able to help, although that comes into it. It's seeing life first hand. Finding out the beginnings. Being in at the start, and there at the finish. Discovering—exploring—making life a little easier, safer for millions of people. Laboratories—not like that little trick one at school. The real thing, you know. Work—and then hitting on something, perhaps, not by accident, not by chance, but by digging and digging—something that cures, something that helps—wonderful—"

"You'd better not confide all this to Hugh."

"I don't intend to. But why not?"

Joyce flushed a very little. A tenuous romance had spun rosy threads between her and young Masterson. She found him disturbing, attractive. He seemed older than the other boys, he had the cultured accent Americans call English, he was going into the diplomatic service, he had traveled since childhood, really traveled, not just walked on a train or boat and made the rounds of hotels.

"He wouldn't approve either—that's why not. You see," explained Yvonne, "men don't progress either. They don't belong to any particular generation. They're fixed. They're as settled as—as your grandmother. All men. Always. People howl about modern boys and girls. What nonsense! There have never been any modern boys—there never will be!"

"What they don't know can't hurt them," said Yvonne.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

With the rain which swept over Pittsburgh Friday night and Saturday the youngsters who are members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club arrived at each of the theaters where the meetings are held, long before the doors were scheduled to open.

Many of the youngsters had planned to see the Pitt-Tech football game, but their parents upon seeing the weather said "No." So the youngsters went to the neighborhood Warner theaters and met Santa Claus instead. Most of the youngsters had attended the meeting last week and therefore brought the stockings that Santa is going to fill for them.

At the Cameraphone Chapter the following members hung up their stockings for Santa:

AT SHERIDAN SQUARE

While almost next door "Uncle Jack," who is J. O. Hooley, manager of the Sheridan Square, was greeting his little charges. The meeting again was conducted in the large club room on the mezzanine floor and many of the youngsters also brought their stockings for Santa.

They are Mary Antionette, Lucielle Hartzell, Mary Lois Phette, Florence Martino, Marion Clinton, Mary Linnelle, Arthur Pisella, Betty Lynch, William Cisman, Marie Joan Leeas, Dorothy Friel, Charles Ross, Ruth Puddles, Dorothy Packard, Richard Reardon, Joe Easmana, Betty Morroney, Gloria Schutzer, George Linn, Jean Morroney, Estelle Schutzer, May Fry, Mary Dewey, Shirley Golbitz, Lois Onder, Peggy Morroney, Dorothy Zimmerman, Billy Zimmerman, Domenic Liberto, George Katson, Pearl Eisman, Rose Zimmerman, Rita Behn, Marion Patterson, Helen Kirchner, Gilda Aloe, Shirley Wiseboad, Virginia Stoab, Molly Eisman, Irene Stein and Jean Zimmerman.

Following the hanging of the stocking the members were entertained by the pupils from the Fairgreaves School of Dancing. Those taking part in the stage show were:

Virginia Eberly in a clever acrobatic dance, Mary Labery who sang "Some of These Days," Betty Lambert in a fast tap routine, Sally Ann Corran in an eccentric dance to the melody of "St. Louis Blues" and Elaine Lavery singing "A Shanty In Old Shanty Town."

From the Outlying Counties

Speedsburg: Can't tell who's elected in this town. Both sides claim it but nobody can prove it. We'll go at it again in 1936.

Tinville: The Republicans got hold of a gallon jug of moonshine while the Democrats were voting wet. The Republicans joined the Socialist candidate because he had the wild cherry. The Democrats won the election but that was about all.

Weetletown: We got a Democrat postmaster at last. But it still ain't safe to write family secrets on postcards.

Deeplots: Eleven of our best voters ain't home yet. We don't expect them very quick. They're the kind of civic-minded citizens who have to go to the city to save the country.

Straight Road: Our Republican Mayor slugged the Democratic chief of police so hard they both ain't feeling very well.

Hairpin Curve: No election returns this year. We used a gasoline can for a ballot box which was sure a good joke on the guy who stole it. It costs 2 cents more a gallon in the next town.

Dribble Junction: Lem Beasley ran for Democrat constable and bumped into his opponent on the main street. Lem made the mistake of trying to arrest his man before he was elected. The other fellow was still the constable. It's anybody's job now until the street cleaning department finds the badge.

Waffle Corners: The Republican postmaster has barricaded himself in his hollow tree and claims his enemies voted twice all around. He was defeated by an overwhelming majority and a stranger.

Rooster Run: It was a glorious Democratic victory this year as usual. But it wasn't big enough for anybody to quit work. The chain store manager double-crossed the Mayor by voting for him. There wasn't nothing for the Mayor to do but go back to his grocery store and start slashing prices.

Cannon Gulch: Everything quiet again. But it took time.

Expenses Must Be Cut

The Committee Seeking a Remedy for Municipal Financial Ills Is On the Right Track.

Six months ago the Community Research Bureau of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board estimated, and so informed Mayor Charles H. Kline and the City Council, that the city would have a deficit of $2,300,000 at the end of the year. This would mean, it was said, an increase of more than 3 mills in the 1933 tax levy.

The prospect now is that the deficit will exceed $2,500,000 and may reach $3,000,000.

Appreciating that an increase in the real estate tax would be an intolerable hardship, and of doubtful efficacy, besides, because there is reason to believe that the effect would be merely to increase tax delinquencies, the Mayor and Council sought revenue from other sources. It was to be obtained under authority of an act passed by the Legislature at the special session, authorizing Pittsburgh and Philadelphia to tax anything not already taxed by the state.

A committee of citizens headed by W. P. Witherow was named to make recommendations concerning new forms of taxation.

But the committee—to its credit be it said—shows a disposition not to recommend new taxes, but a cut in expenses.

That is the solution that has been proposed by the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board and by other organizations which have studied the city's financial condition.

It is the only satisfactory way out of the mess.

Council is expected to receive the budget estimates from the Mayor this week. It is reported unofficially that the Mayor has made few if any payroll reductions. The taxpayers will not be satisfied to carry the 1932 payroll burden into another year, and it is gratifying to learn that Mr. Witherow's committee is carefully scrutinizing the payroll figures of each department over a period of years.

The city must take a leaf from the book of successful business organizations and retrench as they have retrenched.

Let Them Come Here

The Congressional Election Investigators Will Find the Local Situation Worthy of Inquiry.

The House Committee on Campaign Expenditures, which has been investigating election fraud in Philadelphia, found plenty.

The committee was told that a Republican organization man voted 165 times at one voting machine, that votes were bought at prices ranging from 25 cents to $3, that 5,000 cards bearing a false indorsement of the Ku Klux Klan by Roosevelt and Garner were distributed in neighborhoods where the Klan was unpopular, that Democratic ballots were deliberately spoiled by election officials, so they would be thrown out, and much else of the same sort.

The committee said, on leaving Philadelphia, that it would continue its examination of the Pennsylvania elections at an undetermined date.

It is to be hoped the congressional investigators will visit Pittsburgh. The County Commissioners have uncovered some evidence of fraud, but are doubtful of their authority to conduct a thorough investigation. There is no doubt of the House committee's authority.

Food Protection

Dr. C. B. Maits, Public Health Director, Presents Some Interesting Information.

Two hundred and thirty-four and one-half boxes of chewing gum which was to be sold to Pittsburghers was condemned last year by food inspectors of the Department of Public Health as unfit for use, and the sale prevented.

This information, culled from an article about food inspection in the latest issue of "Pittsburgh's Health," the monthly publication of the Department of Public Health, will be illuminating to many Pittsburghers as an example of the extent to which the protection of their health is carried.

Dr. C. B. Maits, Director of Public Health, tells us of many other unwholesome things from which we were saved by the inspectors—45,690 bad melons, 273 bushels of beets, 4,863 bushels of spinach, and hundreds upon hundreds of bushels, barrels, crates, cases, hampers, sacks, baskets, boxes, pails, kegs and jars of other foodstuffs.

This work, it is stated, is not a duplication of the service of the commonwealth's food agents, which has to do with adulteration, misbranding and unfair trade practices rather than with the protection of health.

It is a comfort to know that the city's food inspectors are so alert to guard the public from spoiled and unwholesome victuals.

Crime Control

The National Council of Catholic Men Is Wisely Devoting A Session to This Important Subject.

Crime parades through the news day after day. Holdup succeeds holdup, murder follows murder, in a dreary procession. Such crimes have become so commonplace that it seems sometimes that they are scarcely worthy of comment. Unless someone personally known to you is involved, it is necessary to stop and reflect about these things now and then to keep from getting callous.

We are glad to note that the National Council of Catholic Men, which is holding its twelfth annual conference in Pittsburgh this week, has not permitted itself to become indifferent to the crime problem. It is not among those who shrug their shoulders and say crime has been and always will be, and there is nothing we can do about it.

The council has devoted its session tomorrow night to the consideration of crime and its control. The council is considering many important things—industrial and unemployment problems, education and laymen's church activities—but nothing more important than this.

Share the Loaf!

(Copyright, 1932.)

Behind the "Share-the-Work" movement lies an economic principle, which was explained by Walter C. Teagle, president of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, in the Hearst newspapers on August 28 of this year. Discussing "technological" unemployment, Mr. Teagle said:

"It has been but 45 years since a United States Commissioner of Labor wrote in his annual report that the world was suffering from overproduction, due to machinery, and that it was almost futile to expect much further progress in prosperity. But since then we have gone a long way toward abolishing the seven-day week and the 12-hour shift.

"The six-day week and the eight-hour day absorbed more labor; and with fewer hours and more machinery men lifted their standards of living. In so doing they discredited the Secretary's forecast. We enjoyed the greatest era of prosperity in our history through spreading work and adding to leisure."

The "Share-the-Work" movement seeks permanent benefit from emergency measures.

Our American Government Plan

Is the Machine Running Down? Must the Plan Be Changed?

Copyright, 1932, New York Evening Journal, Inc. Registered U. S. Patent Office.

All those that ask "What is the matter with us, with our country, our industrial system, our suddenly collapsed prosperity?" will be interested in an article by Ida M. Tarbell, "The American Plan—Is It Still Valid?"

Frankly, Miss Tarbell's article, of which some quotations are made here with permission of the Cosmopolitan Magazine for December, discusses the plan laid out by our forefathers and the important question, "IS IT STILL VALID?"

Miss Tarbell, accustomed to write what she thinks, does not hesitate to compare our problem and our "American plan" with the Russian plan, about which so much has been printed. She writes:

WASHINGTON. HE THOUGHT OF IT.

JEFFERSON. HE FORMULATED IT.

"If you are a citizen of these United States, Mr. Reader, you know, even if for the moment you may have forgotten it, that Russia is not the only country on the globe working under a Plan. America, too, has a Plan, one which you have taken an oath to support. It is no five-year Plan. Rather, it is one built for all time.

"It is a Plan that turns America into one great laboratory where, if we are true to the spirit of our oath, we are all workers. In this laboratory we are trying to establish the right of every man to eat the bread he earns, as well as the obligation to earn the bread he eats—the right to think his own thoughts; to find what he is best fitted to do, and to do it.

"Many of our experiments have failed; many have worked against rather than for these great ends. But a failure has always meant that we tried again; an error has meant correction. Such is the spirit of our great national laboratory."

You will see that Ida M. Tarbell has not lost her faith in the American plan or in the ability of this country to work it out. But she knows that frank discussion and clear insight are necessary. You can't succeed merely by wishing or taking things for granted. You must WORK and KNOW WHAT YOU ARE ABOUT.

Many, according to Miss Tarbell, believe that our plan has worked as long as it can, and that we must find another.

There are dozens willing to supply that new plan.

Some would solve our troubles with the single tax, and then be amazed to find that you cannot move people from the crowded streets into the open country. They won't go so far from a moving picture or a soda water stand.

Others, ignoring human nature and the entire history of the human race, suggest "Communism"—all to share equally.

THEY SIGNED THE DECLARATION.

IDA M. TARBELL. SHE DISCUSSES THE PLAN.

That would not work even among mild guinea pigs, much less among grafting, covetous men. You must regulate their grafting and their covetousness, using both for their own good, and for the general good.

That is the big problem.

Miss Tarbell's article in the December Cosmopolitan clears up facts and presents questions admirably.

She invites you to go back to 1789, when the government as we understand it now was "set in motion."

Then, in all the United States there were fewer than 4,000,000 human beings, less than half the population of New York City today. And of those few, more than 690,000 were slaves. Now we number more than 120,000,000, all free, "although some contend that we have as large a proportion of slaves as ever, 'wage slaves.'"

In regard to prosperity Miss Tarbell reminds you that in those early days this country was only about one-quarter its present size, and so poor, it could not pay the soldiers who fought the war that set us on the road to independence.

Now we are the richest people in the world. In supplying population, territory and wealth, our plan certainly has succeeded up to now.

Miss Tarbell asks "What is the matter with us? Is our American plan a failure?

"When is a plan a failure?"

She calls a plan failure when those that live under it lose faith in it.

You must not think that "Business is business" is a modern motto, or that putting human selfishness above human rights is something new. Miss Tarbell reminds you that when it came to making the Constitution

"Mr. Randolph told his colleagues, who were discussing the slave trade, 'Religion and humanity have nothing to do with the question. Interest alone is the governing principle with nations. If the northern states consult their interest, they will not oppose the increase of slaves which will increase the commodities of which they will become the carriers.'

"The northern states 'consulted their interests' and continued to carry the 'commodities.' It took a war to get slavery out of the country. When finally we wrote a clause into our Plan forbidding an institution so contrary to our proposed principles and aims, 'so dishonorable to the American character,' as one of the planners told his colleagues, we were 76 years old.

"That is, after 75 years of experience the Plan was strong enough to preserve itself, to prove that, however important the principle of self-interest may be in government, humanity, freedom, also have a voice."

Readers of this newspaper will be interested in all that Miss Tarbell has to say. Her article will clarify their own thinking, and without presuming to dictate conclusions it will supply suggestions leading to sound conclusions.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

What Is "Worth While?"

If I were a girl of 19, with nothing in the world but hope and faith and young dreams to live on, I would not exchange places with the wealthiest and most fortunate dowager who ever hung a string of pearls around her neck or ordered her liveried footman to keep fresh orchids in her Hispano-Suiza.

* * *

If I were a girl with just a little talent for singing or painting or acting or writing, and lots of ambition, I would not trade places with the most pampered and popular debutante on Park avenue, with nothing to do but amuse herself and kill time between fittings and parties.

If I were a young girl with a devoted, serious, ambitious young lover (poor and struggling and temporarily jobless though he might be), I would not exchange places with any overfed wife of a tired businessman or any bored matron lolling on the sands of Florida, counting the hours between meals, or killing time with hen-bridge.

* * *

If I were a husky, vital young thing with a good golf-arm, a castiron, fool-proof digestion and a double-portion of pep and gay spirits, I would not envy the most exotic orchid of the screen or the most popular prima donna, who ever lived on cough-drops, nerve tonics and a reducing diet.

Because, the only worth-while things in life, after all, are YOUTH, LOVE, HEALTH, COURAGE, WORK and SELF-CONFIDENCE!

* * *

And "living" consists in hoping, dreaming, loving, working and creating!

* * *

That's all there IS—there isn't any more!

Success is sweet! But, the Big Thrill consists in winning it—not in having it. In "getting there," not in arriving.

* * *

Funny, how ardently we believe, in the beginning, that the "worth-while" things in life—the only things we need to make us happy—are money, luxury, triumphs, admiration and good times.

* * *

Funny, how we stand there, at the starting-post, holding all the REALLY worth-while things in our hands—strength, youth, ambition, love and high hopes—and ready to exchange them for the first bright gold-brick Fate offers us.

* * *

"Jack-and-the-Beanstalk" was no more foolish than most of us! Not HALF so foolish, in fact—because, he held onto his courage, and exchanged a stodgy old cow (worth a few dollars and cents) for a bright and glamorous DREAM!

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Arose and merry persiflage from Frank R. Adams in Michigan, who wrote a favorite musical play, "The Time, The Place and The Girl." Arthur Somers Roche on the telephone, highly to bespeak the book, "Too Many Mizners," and we exchanged a ribald story or two.

At my annotations, and with my wife, in her brown knit suit, for a drive. Halooing to Fay King, the limner, and carrying her to her home at the Commodore. Then to Earl Benham's tailoring shop, and two of my favorite persons, Flora Zabelle Hitchcock and Bertha Case, there, and we had tea with cinnamon cakes.

In the evening with Molly Woods, the tennis man's sister, to a dinner and Dudley Field Malone there. Also Lois Long and Esmond O'Brien. Afterward to a play and talked to George S. Kaufman, Clare Booth Brokaw, a lady, pretty to see, and others. Thence home, and skiving a great slice of cheese from the ice box.

That somnolent, squattering square, St. Lukes place, offers sober dignity to Greenwich Village fakeries. On its north side is the three-storied brick house at No. 6, the home of ex-Mayor Walker. The green booth opposite has been carried away. Only the blaze of Mayor's lamps at the steps remains. They grace homes of all former mayors. St. Lukes has the old and gentle dignity of the aristocrat fallen on evil days. Rookeries of pigeons coo in back yards and faintly there is the smell of hops, the vague solace of amber. Loose dogs nap on steps studded with foot scrapers. The fenced-in square seems more a sand lot or wagon yard glorified. Noisy boys play afternoon games, but otherwise the square drowses.

* * *

In contrast to St. Lukes place calm are the two-by-twice magic and souvenir shops in building crannies of Broadway's wild fantasia. Their proprietors are models of patience. Everybody prowls, but few buy. I pastured in the fascinating aisles of one next to the Broadway Theater last night—reveling in trick plate lifters, wax soap, itch powder, dribble glasses, rubber candy, spirit cups, Houdini's Siberian chain escape—75 cents—squirt ash trays, exploding card decks and Hindu rope tricks. I came away with all coat pockets bulging, and a wife who was a Boticelli of boredom.

Near the old Jefferson Market Court on Sixth avenue there was a magic shop, a dingy hole, whose proprietor performed his prestidigitations with the finesse of a Thurston. One visit I found the place shuttered. A few months later the little Belmont offered an entire show of magic by—as I recall Lafayette the Great—and I was in the front row opening night. None of his evanishments interested me as much as the fact Lafayette was my friend of the forlorn magic shop.

Personal nomination for the smoothest—next to Norma Terriss—of the female mimics—Sheila Barrett.

And the waggish Jack Osterman discovers the origin of the name Staten Island. It seems Henrik Hudson, discovering the river that bears his name, saw a low-lying piece of land on his left. "Iss dat un island?" he inquired.

Joe Weber and Lew Fields, in life's sunset, go down the hill arm in arm. There was a time when a rift resulted in their speaking only on the stage, a family ruckus, that healed 15 years ago. Today the valiant old-timers play pinochle and pal around together. Weber is now white-haired and, save for failing eyesight, in good health. Fields, too, is tip-top but not quite so fortunate in his investments as "Mike."

I sat directly behind Miss Constance Bennett's lacquered Marquis at a theatrical inanity the other night. The play offered a 1-2-3-turn humdrum, so I relieved the tedium with closeups of a noble, relaxing. The Marquis is a fellow for daintiness in dress, affects a faintly discernible mustache, has tightly-drawn parchment skin and thin, graceful hands of the exquisite.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

You want to be popular, don't you?

All your life you've wanted to be popular. Worked and worried ceaselessly to make yourself magnetic. Watched with bitter envy the success of other people who seem to succeed without an effort, where you fail in spite of all your hard labor.

And your longing hasn't been born merely of conceit. It has come from something much deeper than personal vanity. You've felt that you needed popularity; needed it as you've needed food and water and clean air.

For what's life worth if one can't win affection and admiration—if one hasn't some power over other lives?

Yet, how to get it?

How do other people get it? You wonder bitterly. What mysterious charm have they, in themselves, which you lack? What trick of gesture? What "line" of talk? And where can you learn the same tricks, the same line?

You can't learn them anywhere, and they wouldn't do you any good if you could. For popularity isn't based on a set of tricks, nor do we charm others by a slick "line."

Why are some people popular? You can answer that for yourself. Stop and think. Why do YOU like certain people? Why do YOU seek such people out, yet remain indifferent to others who seem equally worthy?

Is it because those popular people have something in themselves which you admire?

OR IS IT BECAUSE THEY GIVE SOMETHING TO YOU WHICH YOU DESIRE?

It's because they give you something, isn't it? Because they do something to you; provide you with something you need; fulfill some secret dream.

POPULAR PEOPLE MAKE YOU FEEL AT EASE.

That's a wonderful sensation. You need, terribly, to feel at ease. For you're always a bit bewildered, and afraid of showing it. But some people make you forget your self-consciousness. They're strong and quiet in themselves. If they have personal problems, they don't show them. They are comfortable and easy. Their easiness quiets your own edginess. Soon you're talking without effort, enjoying yourself, acting at your best.

POPULAR PEOPLE AMUSE AND EXCITE YOU.

You need that, too. Life has become a dreary and discouraging affair. You're sick of your monotonous job. You want to get out of your rut, but you haven't the money to go away, either.

But they know how to find fun and drama in the common scene around them, and they pass it on to you. Life sparkles when you're with them. You see things differently. Your imagination comes awake. You have new curiosity, new desire to live. You feel warmed and stimulated.

AND POPULAR PEOPLE MAKE YOU BELIEVE IN YOURSELF.

You need that most of all. You've lost confidence. So many people have criticized you, doubted your ability. But here's someone who doesn't! Here's someone who treats you as if you were wonderful. Once you, too, believed that you were wonderful. And when you believed that, you could do almost anything. Now that old, fighting faith comes back. You're grateful. You're so grateful you'd do anything for that kindly, believing soul who has restored your faith in yourself.

Why are people popular? That's why.

Not because they are something in themselves. Not because they are pretty, or handsome, or smart, or sassy, or successful, or wear lovely clothes, or have gone to romantic places.

These things don't make people popular. These things wouldn't make you popular, even if you could achieve them all.

PEOPLE ARE POPULAR, NOT FOR WHAT THEY HAVE IN THEMSELVES, BUT FOR WHAT THEY GIVE TO THE OTHER FELLOW.

WHAT HAVE YOU TO GIVE THE OTHER FELLOW?

How much do YOU ease his confusion; relieve his boredom, strengthen his faith in himself? Answer that and you'll know the extent of your own popularity—or the secret of your unpopularity.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

It is difficult to make some wives believe that it is necessary to reduce expenses below what they were in the easy money years.

There seems to be no disposition to make reduction in proportion to the decrease in earnings of the head of the house.

When strict and necessary curtailment is insisted upon, a quarrel ensues.

Too many women insist upon maintaining a position in society which they were able to carry on during the flush years, regardless of income.

They demand their usual luxuries as if they were necessities.

Most husbands are glad and willing to provide for their families all that they can, within the measure of their incomes.

But when wives insist upon more than this, there is likely to be some dishonest work on the part of their husbands or many quarrels assuming a serious nature.

The really true helpmeet and good-fellow wife will join her husband in making necessary sacrifices and retrenchments.

Such a wife helps a man work his way up.
